

Enemies Of Israel Lay Plans

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Arab guerrillas and saboteurs punctuated the third anniversary of the 1967 Mideast war today with acts of violence that left three dead and more than a dozen persons injured.

The actions came the day after a dozen Palestinian guerrilla organizations papered over their ideological differences and formed a "supreme military command" to coordinate their operations against Israel.

A band of Arab infiltrators from Jordan opened fire with bazookas on an Israeli border patrol in the Beisan Valley near the frontier shortly after dawn, killing an Israeli officer.

Nine other persons riding in patrol vehicles were injured, slightly.

The Israeli military command said two of the Arab attackers were killed in the encounter.

Throughout Israel and the occupied territories, police and troops kept a tight security grip to prevent incidents.

But in the refugee-packed Gaza Strip three hand grenades were thrown during the morning. Two Arab children and a local man were injured.

Ending a tempestuous six-day meeting in Cairo, the Arab guerrillas also established a 27-member central committee headed by Yasser Arafat of Al Fatah, the largest guerrilla group.

The key accomplishment of the meeting was the agreement of the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. General Command, to join the unified command. This small Marxist-Leninist group had previously rejected outside discipline and busied itself chiefly with terrorist attacks on civilian airliners, a tactic Arafat and others considered detrimental to the Palestinian cause.

The new supreme military command, called an "experiment," will create "joint combat units" and subject all guerrillas to a common discipline, an announcement said.

Earlier this year the guerrillas formed a loosely knit unified command, but it appeared to achieve only slight coordination of activities.

As Israel and the Arab world marked the third anniversary today of the start of the 1967 war, Arab extremists called for strikes and demonstrations in the occupied territories and Israeli Premier Golda Meir called on the Western powers to warn the Soviet Union to get out of the Middle East contest.

In an interview with The Associated Press, the 72-year-old Israeli leader labeled Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser an "obedient servant" of the Soviet Union who has "practically sold out" his nation's sovereignty.

Mrs. Meir said that "free world" reaction to Russian penetration of the Middle East had been lax, encouraging the Soviet Union to involve itself ever more deeply.

She repeated Israel's plea for the sale of warplanes from the United States, adding that "the most important condition to make peace possible here is a strong Israel."

In another anniversary statement, the Israeli chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Haim Bar-Lev, said Israel's strategy against Egypt has shifted from retaliation for specific attacks to "continuous military activity."

"Our policy is to counter war with war, as our means to post-pone all-out conflict and to (See ENEMIES, Page 4.)

Captured By FBI

Arthur G. Barkley, right, the Arizona bakery truck driver who hijacked a TWA jetliner, arrived in U. S. District Court in Alexandria, Va., Thursday night for arraignment. At left is an FBI agent. Maximum penalty for the offense is death. (UPI)

Irked Taxpayer Causes A Tense Hijack Drama

WASHINGTON (AP) — A frustrated taxpayer with a $471 grudge against the government hijacked a jet airliner with 51 passengers and demanded $100 million ransom before two pilots captured him in a tense cockpit gun battle.

Bags stuffed with paper tricked the hijacker into a second landing at Dulles International Airport where marksmen shot out the plane's tires and passengers fled to safety through window exits minutes before the cockpit gunfire began Thursday night.

The pilot, Capt. Dale C. Hupe, was wounded in the stomach when he tackled the gunman as FBI agents stormed the TWA 727 jet.

Arthur G. Barkley, 49, a husky truck driver from Phoenix, Ariz., whose tax appeal was rejected by the U.S. Supreme Court only a few weeks ago, was arrested—bare-chested and bloodied—for air piracy.

The copilot, Donald Salmonson, 33, Overland Park, Kan., said, "I saw his gun go off—and we jumped him immediately."

Salmonson said Hupe was knocked back into one of the seats and the hijacker "fell on him and had his gun in his stomach. That's when I got the gun and wrenched it away."

Hupe was listed in good condition at a Fairfax, Va., hospital. Not a passenger was hurt.

Today, Hupe's condition was described by the attending surgeon as "perfectly fine."

Salmonson said he was convinced the gunman had meant to crash the plane and kill everyone aboard even if he had been paid the ransom.

Barkley was given $100,750 as the first payoff to a hijacker in air history after the captured jetliner landed here on its flight from Phoenix.

But the sandy-haired hijacker sent the plane into the air again and ordered a radio message to President Nixon: "You don't know how to count money

The gunman, who radioed other messages to the Supreme Court, the White House and government agencies throughout the eight-hour odyssey, came back for more money after changing his demand to 100 potato sacks—each crammed with $100 bills or bigger.

"We decided the people would be in worse danger if the plane took off again. The messages were getting worse and worse," said airport manager Dan Mahaney.

Two men with shotguns riding on a fire truck trailing the jetliner as it rolled to a second stop blew out the tires. Passengers poured out the windows onto the wings. The gunman stuck his head out of the pilots' cabin and shouted, but didn't shoot.

He was armed with a .38, a straight edge razor and a can of gasoline, said Mahaney. However, crew members said the pistol was apparently .22-caliber.

The passengers dived into the grass or hid behind fire trucks as a pair of FBI agents climbed onto a wing to enter the plane and the gunman opened fire at them.

Barkley, ruddy-faced, his sport coat and gold shirt both open to the waist, was led away with his hands locked behind his back. A few hours later, he vol-

Nixon Gives an O.K. To Byrd's Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has endorsed a Senate amendment Sen. Frank Church says would "largely emasculate" his proposal to restrict future U.S. operations in Cambodia.

Nixon made the endorsement of the amendment by Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., in a letter to Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott.

"The Byrd amendment reaffirms the constitutional duty of the commander-in-chief to take actions necessary to protect the lives of United States forces and is consistent with the responsibilities of my office. Nixon wrote Scott after a White House conference Thursday.

"Therefore," the President said, "it goes a long way toward eliminating my more serious objections to the Cooper-Church amendment."

Nixon referred to a proposal by Sens. Church and John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., to cut off all funds for U.S. operations in Cambodia after June 30.

Byrd's amendment looms as the key to the current Senate fight on U.S. involvement in Cambodia, which has entered its fourth week.

Other sources indicated a vote may come next Thursday on the Byrd amendment, which would in effect authorize the President to repeat the current U.S. attack into Cambodia if he finds it necessary to protect American troops in Vietnam.

The President also wants the pending restrictions changed to authorize U.S. financial support for military operations by Thai or other Asian forces to bolster the beleaguered Cambodian government headed by Lon Nol.

Nixon cited the doctrine he outlined last year at Guam "establishing a policy for Asian nations to defend themselves, with American material assistance and technical help.

Scott said in a statement, "I am extremely pleased with the letter and I have twice discussed its contents with the President." It was understood this referred to a telephone conversation after Nixon's speech Wednesday night and Thursday's meeting at the White House.

Neither change is believed acceptable to Church, D-Idaho, and Cooper, co-sponsors of the

No Ozark Service Here, Rules Aeronautics Board

Sedalia's chances for getting federal funds toward expansion of the airport here received a serious blow Tuesday when the Civil Aeronautics Board ordered that Sedalia be deleted from Ozark Airline's operating certificate.

The announcement was made Friday morning.

According to the CAB, the board ordered that Ozark's "certificate for Route 107 be amended to delete Sedalia." The action was by unanimous vote.

Deletion of Sedalia from the carrier system was based on a "preponderance of material factors," the board said.

It was also reported that the CAB did not agree with claims by hearing examiner E. Robert Seaver that Sedalia was "discriminated against." Seaver had recommended last November that the Sedalia certificate be reinstated. The CAB decision unanimously overruled him.

Probably the most immediate result of the CAB action may be a loss of Federal Aviation Administration funds.

Seaver had said earlier, "A decision adverse to Sedalia... might cause the FAA to withhold the aid or revise the extent of the eligible improvements and the amount of financial assistance."

Involved would be $700,000 in matching funds from the FAA to go with $790,000 approved in September, 1968, in a special airport improvement bond issue election.

Friday, William Hall, Sedalia industrial development director, said, "I have no comment at this time."

Various factors have caused delays in expanding the airport here, including the loss and eventual reinstatement of an operating certificate for Ozark Airlines, allowing it to put Sedalia on its route at its own discretion.

Condemnation action necessary to obtain land for new runways and other improvements also has been a factor.

Throughout the two-year period in which these issues have been debated, Ozark has maintained a neutral attitude. The airline did not take a stand when the status of the TOKYO (AP) — North Korea claimed it sank a "heavily armed" U.S. spy ship which "intruded deep into the coastal waters" west of North Korea under the cover of fighter planes and warships Friday.

The official Korean Central News Agency, monitored here, said the ship "infiltrated" North Korea's claimed waters around 1:30 p.m. Friday "to conduct reconnaissance."

KCNA said the ship was sunk off Haeju, on the western coast of North Korea about 50 miles south of Pyongyang, capital of North Korea.

The scene is in the same general area where the South Korean Defense Ministry announced Friday two North Korean speed boats fired on and captured a South Korean naval craft with 20 crewmen aboard.

There was no immediate official Pentagon comment on the North Korean claim.

Military sources in Saigon said this indicated the drive into Cambodia had effectively pushed the enemy troops back and cut off the flow of munitions and supplies to enemy units in South Vietnam along that part of the frontier.

Military sources in Phnom Penh reported late Thursday that the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops who seized Set Bo early in the day had been pushed out. But today the Cambodian Command said heavy fighting was going on in the area.

The command rushed a battalion of paratroopers to the battle, the closest so far to the capital, and Cambodian fighter-bombers flew attack missions in support of the ground troops.

It was not clear who held the village, but the enemy attack had developed into much more than a hit-and-run harassing operation. There was speculation that the Communist Command wanted to secure an area close to Phnom Penh from which to launch rockets into the capital, just as they periodically shell Saigon.

Eighty miles north of Phnom Penh, the battle for Kompong Thom was in its third day. A (See CAMBODIA, Page 4.)

Project 'Rent-a-Kid' is Started

Cautioned by Mayor Jerry Jones to approach their task seriously, a group sponsored by the Missouri Valley Human Resource Development Corp., Friday launched project "Rent-a-Kid" here.

The project involves youngsters from ages eight to 18 who will now be available through the local project for odd jobs in Sedalia.

Local supervisor of the program is Mrs. Mildred Wade, 114 West Jefferson. Project headquarters is located in the Tiffany House lobby, 116 South Ohio St.

According to Mrs. Wade, the jobs for which children will be available include babysitting, lawn care, errands, housework, window washing, cleaning and dusting in stores, waitress work, answering telephones, dish washing and so on.

The program was checked out with the Division of Employment Security, according to Mrs. Wade, and every effort was made to avoid conflicts with federal labor laws.

Mrs. Wade said no fee would be charged for the placement service. Job listings will be announced through project headquarters, she said, as will availability of workers.

In every case, Mrs. Wade

George Wallace Believes He Speaks to 'Millions'

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — George C. Wallace says his nomination for governor is something of a national poll on federal control of the schools because "I represent millions of people" in and out of the South.

Wallace, in an interview, refused to say that under no circumstances will he run for president again in 1972, but he emphasized that he has no such plans at this time.

"I ran to be governor of Alabama," he said, "and that's what I have on my mind at the present time, making a good fulltime governor of Alabama."

His Democratic nomination for Governor, Wallace said, probably lessens the chance that he will run for president "because I think my election is a poll to Mr. Nixon that I not only represent Alabama but I represent many millions of people in the South and in the country."

The 1968 third-party presidential candidate actually hasn't been elected governor yet, but he is all but certain to be in November since the Republicans aren't likely to run anyone against him.

Wallace said he is hopeful that President Nixon will see at least that the freedom-of-choice school desegregation doctrine is restored in the South.

If he doesn't?

"That's a hypothetical question," said the former governor who won nomination for another term in Tuesday's runoff primary. "Let's just see if he does it."

Ultimately, he said he hopes to see the federal government return "complete control" of the schools to the states. But, he said, "I recognize at the moment that they are not going to go that far."

Here are questions asked during the interview, and Wallace's answers:

Q. Your nomination projects you back into the national picture. What do you think your role is now as a national figure?

A. I think that the fact that I was elected governor is a message to the Nixon administration about commitments he made to return the schools at least under a freedom-of-choice plan to the states. I ran for governor of Alabama and I'm going to serve as governor of this state.

Q. Are you saying that you will not under any circumstances run for president again in 1972?

A. I'm not saying that under no circumstances would I run. I ran to be governor of Alabama and that's what I have my mind on at the present time, making a good fulltime governor of Ala-

'Jesus Freaks' Working Beside Campus Radicals

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — As they put it, they've been "turned on by Jesus." And things seem different. Most of them are hippies. Others are "straight" kids. In either case, they're making their presence felt around the University of California campus here.

They're called "Jesus Freaks," a term originally applied in derision, but which they gladly accept. After all, the term, "Christian" itself originally was used in pagan mockery of the early believers in Christ.

"Jesus is back!" said a tall, barefoot, long-haired lad, handing out evangelical tracts to passing students. "Take a trip with the Lord—it's the greatest."

Here and there about the campus, on class days and weekends, it's easy to spot these special kind of radicals in clusters of youths, "rapping" about Jesus in arguments with assorted New Left advocates.

Wherever the "Jesus Freaks" hold forth, there's usually a sizable crowd. "One way! One way!" they signal about Christ, with a single finger held aloft, instead of the "V" peace-victory sign.

Regularly, they also make forays into downtown San Francisco, displaying their signs, "Jesus Saves," and speaking on sidewalks outside the "skin" bars featuring nude dancers.

"I've been through 'grass', the heavyweight stuff, LSD and speed, and all the meditation-treating bit, and it just freaked me out and down," said one of them, a thin, bearded young man. "But Jesus is very true, very hip, very with it. He's our thing."

Others tell similar stories of having been through drugs and Oriental mysticism before finding greater satisfaction in "following Jesus."

Formally, the "Jesus Freaks" are known as the Christian World Liberation Front. They began appearing around Berkeley about a year ago, adding a new element to a campus of 28,000 students known for its tumults and radical movements—Marxists, Maoists, Free-Speech'ers, war resisters.

The "Jesus Freaks" also are anti-Vietnam war and generally anti-establishment, even anti-church so far as the official institutions, claiming it has become stuffy, stiff and lost its sense of the "Spirit," the mysteries and joy.

"The straight church is too uptight," said one young man in black pullover shirt, beads and striped pants. "But Jesus is a real revolutionary, a man of the people."

There are no regularly kept statistics on the "Jesus Freaks," but estimates are that 300 to 400 of them are active here, and the number grows with frequent converts, who are channeled into Bible study groups. Those on drugs also are given medical help.

Many of them have taken up communal-style living, in imitation of early Christians, living in groups in houses scattered about in residential areas with names such as House of Acts, Tree of Life, Fish House.

Some are disciplined communes including married couples; others are more casual, offering a young person a pad and food, along with Bible talk.

The Christian World Liberation Front maintains a two-room office near the campus, decorated with modernistic pictures of Jesus and slogans. It also publishes an underground-style newspaper, "Right On."

Several older Christians have helped shape the movement, including Dr. Jack Sparks, 40, a former Pennsylvania State University professor who came here with his family to do missionary work.

His living room regularly is crowded with young men and women for study and worship.

Says he: "We pass an offering plate and tell people to put money in if they can and take it out if they need it. It always ends up empty."

The Rev. John A. MacDonald of Mill Valley Calif., who also helped spur the Berkeley evangelism, says that when a hippie accepts Christ, he "easily assumes that total wisdom floods his being."

Although he is just "a beginner, a simple babe in Christ, his mystical background tells him, 'This is it—I've arrived.' No matter what a serious-minded pastor or theologian might offer, if the young convert has a different revelation, he thinks everyone else is wrong."

He says the converted hippies have a "hard time reconciling their new outlook to what they find in the churches" and "many church members have a hard time accepting the hippies."

Hums, Not Moo's From Cow Model

DAVIS, Calif. (AP) — Animal scientists at the University of California Davis campus are building a model of a cow.

It won't go "moo," but there might be a gentle hum, plus the clickity-clack of the computer cards. And it will give theoretical milk.

The idea is to construct a dairy cow through a series of mathematical formulas that describe how cows produce milk, and how they might produce more milk.

Nixon's Aides Are Uneasy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House "kiddie corps"—President Nixon's flock of young aides—is following the leader but some are uneasy about the lines of communication between the President and the nation's youth.

While remaining basically loyal, some wonder aloud about how accessible the President is to the young point of view. At least one is even more outspoken about the administration's reaction to campus dissent.

"I think the vice president has aggravated a bad situation. As far as I am concerned, his rhetoric is just as destructive as burning down an ROTC building."

Said another: "He (Nixon) gets all his options in memo form, but I'm not sure how much he absorbs. How can he communicate with the nation's young people if he can't convince me he understands what's dividing this country?"

Other staffers said they have shuddered at some of Vice President Spiro Agnew's remarks. At the same time, they insisted "his speeches make remarkable good sense if only the media wouldn't take them out of context."

Interviews with some 20 young White House aides indicate a sharp division between what they call "the straight arrows" and the more liberal types.

The former prides itself on impartiality. Their job, they say, is to present all the options to the President without getting involved. The more liberal staffers say they tear their hair out regularly.

A number of the aides—most of whom work within 100 yards of the President's office—wonder why he doesn't consult with them from time to time. Most say they never see him except at an occasional church service or a White House receiving line.

They concede that anything they tell him he probably already knows. But almost all of them said they would like to talk with the President if only to reassure themselves the man knows what America is made of.

"When I go home," said one White House aide, "my friends ask what the President is really like. I have to say I don't really know."

Many of the aides like to claim, however, that Nixon has more young people on the White House staff than any of his predecessors. They say he likes young blood, energy, fresh ideas.

There are at least 30 people under 30 who have the title of "Staff Assistant to the President," "Deputy Secretary," or "research assistant." Most of them are men, the majority of whom come from the Midwest or California and represent a monied middle class.

All are intense, superconscientious and all, including the one known registered Democrat are completely dedicated to their work and Richard Nixon.

Almost all the young staffers work 12 to 16 hour days, six and sometimes seven days a week. For some, it's not unusual to arrive at the White House at 7:30 a.m. and not leave until 10:30 or 11 p.m.

Glamorous? Sometimes, but not usually.

"The glamor wears off after a few months, but the excitement never does," said Tina Buecheit, 26, confidential assistant to the director of communications, Herb Klein.

Miss Buecheit is a pretty blonde from Youngstown, Ohio, who lives in a handsome apartment in Washington's luxury housing complex, the Watergate, where she entertains frequently.

"There's nothing glamorous about working until 10 p.m. on a Saturday night and turning down dinner with your best beau," said Susie Low, 26, East

Islip, Long Island, N.Y., Klein's news researcher.

"Working in the White House is a very personal experience. It has its ups and downs," said Chester E. Finn, Jr., 25, of Dayton, Ohio, a staff assistant to the President in domestic affairs.

Finn, known to his friends as "Checker," has impressive credentials which include Exeter, Harvard (B.A., M.A.T. and a Ph.D. this month).

Finn said most White House staffers consider him "left of center" but that most of his Cambridge friends probably call him a "Fascist pig."

"The young people here do a substantial part of the hard work which makes the White House run; they make a lot of wheels turn," he said.

Another heavyweight in what some call the "White House Kiddie Corps" is Christopher DeMuth, 23, of Kennilworth, Ill., also a staff assistant to the President, specializing in environment.

When DeMuth first came to the White House, he worked on the staff of Daniel Patrick Moynihan, the President's urban affairs Counsellor.

Moynihan was chairman of the Joint Center for Urban Studies when I was at Harvard," DeMuth said. "I used to bus-boy their Tuesday luncheons because it was the only way I could get in to hear their speakers."

DeMuth said he pictures himself as a "libertarian conservative."

"Sometimes I feel middle aged and out of shape, but government has always been the most important thing to me. Peace now. Peace next week. That's no good. They're slogans. I'm much more aware of the complexities of government now," he said.

One of the most affable and articulate of the young staffers is 28-year old Bruce Rabb, staff assistant to the President, specializing in civil rights, civil liberties and disaster relief.

"We don't have a major impact on large policy, but we can have one on the secondary ones," he said. "And as long as we can help on a secondary basis, it's worth it."

Rabb graduated cum laude in Latin-American history from Harvard after three years and did graduate work at L'Institut de Science Politique in France. He graduated from Columbia Law School in '66.

Among the aides who said he's been disturbed by the recent youth protests is Lyndon "Mort" Allin, 29, staff assistant to the President and the man who prepares his morning news summary.

"I question the idea that the President has underestimated the feelings of young people. I really don't think he has lost his perspective," Allin said. "It's of some concern to me that more moderate students are becoming involved."

Allin describes himself as "a moderate conservative." He said he includes in the President's news report articles "from I. F. Stone to Combat, and occasionally a piece from Hard Times," an anti-establishment publication. At the University of Wisconsin, from which he graduated and received a masters degree, he was in charge of a committee to support U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

A pretty young staffer who disagrees with the Agnew criticism is Pokey Sullivan, 27, of Coco, Florida, staff assistant to the vice president.

"I respect everything about the vice president," she said. "He's a strong person. Our staff is more relaxed than the President's because it's smaller. We see the V.P. quite often."

Tod Hullin, 26, of Seattle, Wash., is administrative assistant to John Ehrlichman, assistant to the President in domestic affairs. Hullin's father and Ehrlichman were law partners in Seattle.

When asked if his parents think he's the President's right-hand man, Hullin said, "Oh, no, they know I'm John's right-hand man and that John is the right hand of the President."

Another one of the few young men who often travel with the President and said he sees him at least once a day is Lawrence Higby, 24, of Pomona, Calif., H.R. Haldeman's right-hand man.

Higby is a J. Walter Thompson alumnus who graduated from UCLA in '68 in political science.

When asked what he'd discuss if he could spend half an hour alone with the President, Higby said: "It doesn't make sense for him to talk with Larry Higby when there's the expertise of a Henry Kissinger available. But I suppose I'd tell him that the young who are demonstrating represent a small percentage of the young compared to the large percentage who support him."

"This is an incredibly great place to work," said Barbara "Bobbie" Greene, 25, of Forest Hills, N.Y., one of 18 White House Fellows. Miss Greene, one of the founders of the Ripon Society, a liberal Republican group, graduated from Vassar College in '65, received a masters from Columbia in '66 and a law degree from Yale Law School in '69.

"Not many young people have a chance to work in the west wing of the White House," she said. "Whenever I get bored with the memos, I remind myself, 'you're writing memos to the President, you dum-dum.'"

Lindsay Remark May Cost City A Convention

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Remarks attributed to Mayor John V. Lindsay praising young men who refuse to serve in Vietnam may cost New York City the 1972 Veterans of Foreign Wars convention.

In a statement issued from national headquarters here, the commander, Raymond A. Gallagher of Redfield, S.D., said that since Lindsay's remarks were reported, members "from all over the country" have urged him to withdraw the convention from New York.

"I concur with these suggestions completely," he said.

Gallagher said remarks attributed to Lindsay at the University of Pennsylvania on April 29 were "an insult to the membership of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, all of whom have served this nation during time of war."

He quoted Lindsay as saying: "The ones I have unending admiration for are the guys who say, 'I simply will not serve in the Army of the United States in Vietnam,' and are willing to take the consequences of it. These are the guys who are heroic."

Gallagher said he would urge changing the site of the 1972 convention when the VW national council of administration meets in Miami Beach in August.

military spokesman said the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces that seized part of the city of 25,000 had renewed their assaults against government strongpoints. He said at least 100 enemy troops had been killed, but the attacking forces still surrounded the town, and some of them had advanced to near the market place in the center.

Cambodian fighter-bombers flew repeated missions in the area, the spokesman said, and helicopter pilots spotted several enemy groups carrying away dead and wounded.

The fall of Lomphat after a week of fighting left the government only one foothold in Cambodia's most northeastern province. This was Labansiek, a district capital 10 miles north of Lomphat and 190 miles north-east of Phnom Penh.

Military sources said the enemy was determined to control all of Ratanakiri Province to give them maximum security on the lower stretches of the Ho Chi Minh trail down which men and material come from North Vietnam to the war in South Vietnam.

said, the wages paid will be determined by the employer and the employee. Both workers and employers, however, are urged to report wages paid, working conditions and so on to project headquarters.

Since terms of employment will be decided by the persons directly involved, Mrs. Wade said "Project Rent-a-kid" would not be responsible in the event of accidents, injury and so on.

The basic purpose of the program, Mrs. Wade said, is "to provide the child something constructive to do during the day."

Mayor Jones, who addressed about 25 persons after a ribbon-cutting ceremony, said "two immediate areas of responsibility" had been created by the project.

"The first involves the adults, of course," he said. "However, I urge each and every one of you here to take seriously any job you do. It hurts no one to work. A job well-done can be very rewarding."

The project headquarters will be staffed Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. On the staff are Mrs. Wade; Mrs. Grace Thompson, secretary; and Mrs. Betsy Sims, Mrs. Evelyn Patterson and Miss Deborah Johnson, assistant part-time field workers.

Rate

ployment in May occurred among white workers, whose jobless rate rose from 4.5 to 4.6 per cent, the bureau said.

The Negro jobless rate fell from 8.7 to 8 per cent but was still above the 7.1 per cent rate of March.

The report said that the average length of joblessness of workers lengthened in May. Those unemployed five to 14 weeks rose by 140,000 and long term unemployment of 15 weeks or more rose to 610,000.

The number of persons working part time because they could not find full time jobs dropped 110,000 in May to a total of 2.2 million. However, this had followed a jump of 425,000 in April.

achieve a situation as close as possible to an actual ceasefire," the general told Israeli military correspondents.

"This also goes for the terror gangs," he added, referring to Arab guerrillas.

Israeli military and police officials warned Arab leaders in the occupied areas they would not tolerate disorders during the anniversary, and security precautions were tightened in the Arab sector of Jerusalem, the Gaza Strip and the West Bank of the Jordan River.

In Jordan, several thousand Palestinian guerrillas marched through Amman to mark the anniversary, chanting slogans and waving banners denouncing Zionism and "American imperialism" and lauding Arab unity, the Soviet Union, and the Viet Cong.

Fewer Mishaps Recorded

There were fewer accidents in May of 1970 than in the same month of 1969, according to C. R. Harrell, Records Clerk for the Sedalia Police Department.

Seventy accidents with 13 injuries were recorded last month compared to the 77 accidents and 29 injuries for May of 1969. However, one death marred this year's May record.

As of June 1st, city records show 405 accidents with 81 injuries and three deaths for 1970. At this point in 1969, records revealed 341 accidents with 95 injuries and only death.

bama. But the fact that I am elected probably makes the chances less that I will have to be involved in national politics because I think my election is a poll to Mr. Nixon that I not only represent Alabama but I represent many millions of people in the South and in the country.

Q. How would this pressure be manifest? How would Mr. Nixon respond to this pressure? What do you think he would do?

A. I am hoping that Mr. Nixon will carry out the commitments he made about the schools and that some of the orders that have come down written by HEW (the Health Education and Welfare Department) for the September opening of schools throughout the South would be modified, especially toward freedom of choice. I want to see some day the complete return of the public school system to the states. In the meantime, I am prayerful that the President will carry out the commitment that he made in Charlotte, N.C., during the campaign for the presidency.

Q. If he doesn't do that, then what do you anticipate will happen politically?

A. That's a hypothetical question. Let's just see if he does it. But I think that to win the presidency the next time he must carry the states of the South and I believe the people of the South will have the balance of power as they did in the last election and that what he does about the school system will greatly enhance his chances of winning or losing in this region of the country.

Q. If the South were to get together and exert the balance of power, would they not have to do it behind some other candidate such as you?

A. Well, not if the President carried out his commitment, Nixon is in power. The incumbent administration has the authority and power to do that which the people want in this part of the country so it's not necessary that a new party candidate run at all. It's necessary that one of the parties at least come around to the position that we take.

Q. If you did decide to run again, would you run nationally or would you run regionally, representing the South?

A. Well, that's still a hypothetical question based on a lot of ifs and ands that might happen between now and 1972, so I frankly don't want to go into any discussion that would indicate that I have in mind running for president at this time because I do not at this time.

Q. If you were to run for president again, do you think the issue of the Negro bloc vote in your campaign for governor might hinder you from running in some of the Northern states, would it brand you as a one-issue candidate?

A. Well, of course you're asking another hypothetical question because I don't have any plans to run for president this time, but I think bloc voting is bad anywhere in the United States.

Accidents

No injuries or damages were reported following a spectacular accident at Broadway and Stewart at 3:49 p.m. Thursday.

According to police, a flatbed trailer with a tractor on it overturned after the driver, Allen D. Kreiger, Windsor, swerved to miss the truck in front of him. The other driver reportedly swerved to avoid a collision with a car in front of him after its driver stopped suddenly. None of the vehicles collided with the other, however the trailer being pulled by Kreiger's five-ton truck overturned.

Kreiger's truck and the one in front of him were part of a Whiteman Air Force Base convoy.

Traffic along Broadway was tied up for some time before the trailer and tractor could be uprighted.

Fish Warning Is Reiterated By Department

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Conservation Department today re-emphasized its warning that fish from contaminated Crooked Creek in Lincoln County should not be eaten.

"The Crooked Creek fish are hotter than a firecracker because of a contamination by pesticides early in May," said Pete Redmon, water quality biologist for the department.

He said, however, that fish in Cuivre River, into which Crooked Creek flows, do not have a dangerous residue of chlordane as the Crooked Creek fish do.

Fish samples taken as much as 5 1/2 miles below the location of the pesticide dump showed as much as 8.5 parts of chlordane per million.

"We usually find residues in the one-hundredths of a part per million," Redmon said, "so this is a hot fish."

The first analysis of the pollutant showed quantities of malathion and chlordane. Malathion dissipates quickly but chlordane does not. Redmon said he would take further samples, possibly in July, to see whether fish in the area have accumulated residues of the poison.

certificate was being debated in Washington.

Dr. Holmes Wilbur, chairman of the airport board, was not available for comment on the CAB decision.

Original plans included a new 6,000-foot runway as part of the overall $1,490,000 expansion program. Without the runway, Ozark planes could not have landed here. Present facilities are considered inadequate.

It could not be learned just what steps might be taken by the city now, but one official said, "There apparently isn't much we can do about the CAB's decision."

Emissary To Vatican Is Lodge

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon announced today he is making Henry Cabot Lodge his personal emissary to the Vatican but without giving him a formal diplomatic title.

Press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Lodge will be going to the Vatican two or three times a year as required and may remain there as long as a month on each occasion.

The question of American diplomatic representation at the Vatican has been a source of recurrent controversy and it seemed apparent that Nixon wants to have the benefits of regular contacts with Pope Paul VI and other church leaders without inviting a Senate battle that might spring from a formal diplomatic nomination.

Lodge is an Episcopalian. Lodge, a former Massachusetts senator, was the 1960 Republican candidate for vice president. Later, he served as ambassador to Vietnam and as head of the Vietnam peace negotiators in Paris.

Ziegler described the Lodge's assignment, which he will perform without salary, as providing "greater continuity in the informal contacts which already have been taking place" since the President took office.

A handful of administration officials, including Nixon himself, have met with the Pope since January 1969.

Lodge, who will make his first trip to Rome later this month, will find "suitable living and office arrangements there," Ziegler said. Lodge will not operate out of the U.S. embassy in Rome.

Ziegler was uncertain whether the unofficial envoy would have a permanent staff.

Mayor Working To Counteract 'Life' Story

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Mayor A.J. Cervantes has made the first of a series of television and radio appearances he hopes will help counteract the effect of a Life Magazine article saying organized crime flourishes in St. Louis and which linked the mayor with criminal elements.

Cervantes, flanked by Police Chief Eugene Camp and detective Chief John Doherty, answered questions put to him by three KSD-TV newsmen Thursday night.

The mayor and Morris Shenger, an attorney and the head of the mayor's new crime commission, will also be on television for two hours Saturday night. Shenger also was mentioned in the Life article.

Re-Elect Browder To Library Board

H. E. Browder was unanimously re-elected president of the board of directors of the Sedalia Public Library at a meeting Wednesday.

Also unanimously re-elected were Mrs. John Kniest, vice president, and Mrs. H. W. Harris, secretary.

The budget for the fiscal year 1970-71 was approved by members present, and will be presented Monday night to the city council.

The next meeting of the board will be June 17 at the library.

Smith To Board Of Curators

COLUMBIA — Pleasant R. Smith, Columbia, was elected president, and Mrs. Avis Tucker, Warrensburg, vice president of the University of Missouri-Columbia board of curators at the boards annual meeting June 2.

Smith, a member of the board since 1965, was graduated from the university in 1949 with a bachelor of science in business administration. He was co-captain of the Tigers 1948-49 basketball team.

A graduate of the university in 1937 with a bachelor of arts degree, Mrs. Tucker was appointed curator in December 1966 to succeed her late husband, William C. Tucker. Only the fourth woman in the 131-year history of the university to hold such a position, Mrs. Tucker is publisher of the Warrensburg Daily Star-Journal, and president of Johnson County Broadcasters, Inc., operators of radio station KOKO, Warrensburg.

Nixon

pending proposal, which is itself an amendment to military sales authorization legislation.

Debate on the measure entered its fourth week Thursday with Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield reiterating he will not lay it aside for other administration-backed legislation, including the House-passed bill to increase the federal debt ceiling by $18 billion.

Congressional failure to pass this measure by the end of the month could leave the government unable to pay its bills.

Before Nixon's support for the Byrd amendment became known, Church said in an interview it will be "the most critical vote we face."

"It looks very close," the Idaho Democrat said.

Republican sources said support for the Byrd amendment is "in the 40s," while Cooper-Church backers said their strength is "in the 50s."

An earlier amendment to water down the Cooper-Church measure failed 54 to 36, but both sides expect the vote on Byrd's amendment to be closer.

Asked about its effect, Church said "It would largely emasculate the amendment, leaving only those restrictions against sending American personnel" such as advisers and instructors for the Cambodian army.

As it now stands, the Cooper-Church amendment bars funds for retaining U.S. forces in Cambodia after July 1 and puts limits on aid and use of airpower, including providing "persons to engage in any combat activity in support of Cambodian forces."

By limiting the latter restriction to U.S. personnel, the administration would open the way for American financial backing of the Thai volunteers scheduled to be sent to Cambodia in a few weeks.

The Byrd amendment adds language to the Cooper-Church proposal authorizing the President to take "such action as may be necessary to protect the lives of United States forces in South Vietnam or to facilitate the withdrawal of United States forces from South Vietnam."

This is unacceptable to hardcore Cooper-Church backers. The present operation was justified as necessary to protect American forces in Vietnam and they want to prevent a repetition.

In related action, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler said Thursday he doubted it would be safe to withdraw more than 150,000 American troops from South Vietnam by next spring.

The outgoing chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff refused to predict whether it would be possible to go as high as 200,000 men.

Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird reiterated his hopes to exceed the 150,000-man withdrawal set by President Nixon.

Both men appeared on an NBC TV-radio program "Meet the Press."

Analysis Is Not Easy
Of Detroit's Problems

Reform Democrats Plan
A Quiz For Candidates

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — What's the matter with Detroit? More precisely, what's the matter with the Big Three automotive companies, among the mightiest enterprises of industrial society?

Asked this question, anyone is entitled to one of his own: Where do you begin? With depressed profits? With annual meeting challenges? Safety? Pollution? Sagging stock prices? Dealer franchise problems?

All major issues, but can any problem of the automotive industry be more directly tied to profits—and to the imbalance in U.S. foreign payments—than the surprising challenge of foreign imports?

Sales of foreign cars in the United States were higher in May than in any month on record, according to a Wall Street Journal survey. It showed deliveries of 109,000 cars and indications of another year of one million-plus sales for foreign manufacturers.

Most of these foreign manufacturers are Davids compared with the Detroit Goliaths, but quite clearly the Davids are slinging it to their bigger adversaries.

Toyota sales rose 45.9 per cent over May 1969. Volkswagen rose 4.8. Datsun 42.8. Volvo 30.1. Curiously, sales of Opel, the General Motors import from Germany, decreased 22.7 per cent. All are compact cars.

Why is it that so many foreign companies can sell profitably in the United States while only three U.S. automakers—General Motors, Ford and Chrysler—can show consistent profits?

More to the point, how can foreign companies design cars so greatly desired in the American market while domestic companies, which pride themselves on market research, miss so obvious an opportunity for sales?

While it is difficult to explain the questions, it is possible to suggest that when Detroit puts its mind to work—when it designs cars smaller than the conventional models—it can slow the foreign inroads.

Early in the 1960s it did just that. Detroit decided to turn out smaller cars in volume to meet foreign competition, which consisted mainly of small editions. As a result, the percentage of imports to total U.S. sales fell in 1960, 1961 and 1962.

Then Detroit regressed to an old habit. It began to enlarge the size of its compacts. Not content with enticing owners to “buy up” into larger models, it began building the compacts themselves into larger models.

In every year since 1962 the percentage of imports to total sales of cars increased, reaching 11 per cent last year. And in every year from 1962 to 1967 Detroit turned out fewer compacts in relation to total production.

In 1968 the American manufacturers began an attempt to reverse the trend by, once again, returning to compact production. But some foreign cars now have a foothold in the market and a reputation that may make it difficult to slam the door. Can Detroit do it?

Americans may not have to wait long for an answer. The percentage of smaller cars coming out of Detroit is rising again, and some automotive men are confident that the foreign tide may at least be stemmed if not turned back.

Foreign car importers remained confident, however. Their reputations in some instances are as solidly established at those of the Big Three. And their marketing ingenuity cannot again be underestimated.

And then there remains that perplexing manifestation of the Detroit syndrome, that cars must be enlarged or embellished regardless of what the market demands.

The situation suggests two other questions:

Will Detroit fall into the same habit again?

Or will it recognize that current markets may be unlike those of the 1950s, markets in which the great variety of foreign imports permits buyers to select rather than accept what is available?

Has A New System To Stop Skidding

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — James Stein says he has the answer to skidding on the nation's highways, and he's giving the state a free demonstration.

Stein recently supervised application of the process on a new bridge's concrete roadbed.

Here's how it works:

A coat of glue is spread on the concrete. Then special sand—obtained by crushing natural asphalt rock mined only in Kentucky and near Trinidad, he said—is sprayed on the glue, the excess is blown off and the area is covered with a rubber-base paint.

Stein said the process, which leaves the pavement looking like coarse sandpaper, “should cut down the chances of skidding about two-thirds. If you do skid, it will be forward and not in a fish-tailing manner.”

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats vying for leadership positions are going to be asked for their views on congressional reform proposals before the issue becomes overshadowed by a scramble for the majority leader's post.

Reps. Henry S. Reuss of Wisconsin and Charles A. Vanik of Ohio, two reform minded Democrats say they hope to determine where the various candidates stand on such issues as seniority, powers of committee chairmen, and the practice of holding secret committee sessions.

Reuss and Vanik want to pin the candidates down on reform issues early in the campaign so their positions will be clearly known when the majority leader's post is filled next year.

The leadership fight was touched off by Speaker John W. McCormack's announcement that he will retire at the end of this session. Oklahoma Rep. Carl Albert now holds the majority leader position, but is expected to be elected speaker when the new Congress convenes next January.

The two congressmen have identified four areas of reform in which they will seek the views of the candidates:

—The election of committee chairmen by the Democratic caucus, which consists of all Democratic members, or some other alternative to the seniority system which now automatically elevates the member with the longest service.

—Changes in House legislative procedures to provide that all votes taken are on the record. Most key votes now are taken by head counts without the member being recorded.

—The need for democratic procedures in committees so chairmen will not be able to exercise arbitrary powers.

—The abolition of all secret committee sessions except when required by national security interests.

At present, five members have announced as candidates for majority leader: Reps. James G. O'Hara of Michigan, Morris K. Udall of Arizona, Hale Boggs of Louisiana, Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois and Wayne L. Hays of Ohio.

O'Hara and Udall are leaders in the Democratic Study Group, an informal organization of liberals that has been pressing for Congressional reforms.

Boggs is currently the Democratic Whip, the party's number three leadership position behind the speaker and majority leader.

Rostenkowski, a protege of Chicago mayor Richard Daley, is now chairman of the Democratic caucus. Hays, a barbed-tongued debater, has never held any leadership position.

Why pay up to $259* more for a compact when Maverick gives you all this?

Why pay more when Maverick saves you money right from the start? And however you figure it . . . size, power, economy . . . Maverick gives you more in the bargain!

Maverick is no lightweight. Its wide tread and stability makes for a sure grip on the road. Yet there's no excess weight to cause acceleration lag or reduce fuel economy.

Maverick is perky. Some competitive makes have four cylinders. Maverick's got a 170 CID six-cylinder that delivers 105 hp. It gets you up to expressway speeds in less than 15 seconds . . . without getting you in hock at the gas pumps.

Maverick is economical to drive. Test drivers averaged 22.5 mpg in simulated actual driving conditions. This means you could go up to 350 miles or more between gas stops.

Maverick is simple to park. It's less than 15 feet long and has a turning diameter of only 35.6 feet. So you can nip in and out of tight parking spots and tough traffic, easier than the big guys.

Maverick is simple to maintain. You can do it yourself. The Maverick Owner's Manual is packed with simple diagrams and instructions.

Maverick is easy to own. So easy, in fact, with its low, low price, that you can even move up to a jazzy Maverick Grabber and still beat that compact price.

Maverick is America's biggest selling small car. And that means you can expect top dollar resale value when it comes time to trade. Maverick just doesn't know how to stop saving for you.

Slump in Job Market

The plans of many students, or so we are hearing, to take the summer off to work out their frustrations against the system by devoting themselves to the campaigns of the candidates of their choice in this fall's elections may make good economic as well as political sense.

The job market, from current indications, is in no condition to absorb the masses of young that have flooded it seasonally during the long years of economic expansion. A general cutback in new hiring is showing up in federal surveys of employment potentials.

Curtailed opportunities are having an immediate effect on job-finding programs for needy urban youth, with several major cities already reporting serious problems, and on the masses of students still in school who usually seek summer-only jobs.

But the cruelest cut of all is to graduates, who in most fields have had it very good in a seller's market for almost as long as current generations can remember.

Recruiting, particularly on-campus, is generally down. Most graduates can still expect to be placed, if no longer so quickly, but few are in a position to pick and choose among choice offers.

There are, however, a few notable exceptions. Prospects continue good for qualified graduates from minority groups, particularly blacks. Once as a population group the first to suffer in bad times, they are still in relatively short supply and still sought after.

The equal opportunity slogan needs updating. Things have changed.

—O—
Westward Ho, Teachers
Horace Greeley apparently has found an entire new generation of disciples.

The great editor's advice of a century ago to "go West" is suddenly being taken by teachers who, according to a recent news item, are fleeing the educational and environmental crises of the cities for the wide-open spaces of Montana.

The underpopulated mountain state, long on scenery but short on appeal for the sophisticated, only a few years ago had problems staffing its schools. But to their surprise, superintendents currently are besieged by applicants from out-of-state. The Great Falls school system, for example, reports some 1,500 applications for 125 vacancies.

And for the privilege of seeing clean cities and clean-looking students, the out-of-staters are willing to take, according to one superintendent, "awful salary cuts" — up to $3,000 a year.

That in itself just might be enough of a shock to many a financially pressed metropolis to put new life into the environmental cleanup campaign.

Campus Capers Costly
Add to the high cost of higher education:

The Ohio National Guard says the bill for the use of troops on the state's campuses is more than $1 million — so far.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Refugees Tell of Bombing of Laos

WASHINGTON — Refugees too inarticulate, too simple to repeat the same lie, have sworn to this column that U.S. fighter-bombers have conducted systematic raids on villages in Laos, killing defenseless civilians, many of them children.

The stark simplicity of the refugees' stories, as told to my reporter Les Whitten, flies in the face of official testimony. Bluff, blunt William Sullivan, a former ambassador had to approve the targets before they were hit. He was supported by Col. Robert Tyrrell, the Air Force attache in Laos, who testified: "Villages even in the free drop zone would be restricted from bombing." Whitten spoke to the colonel, now back in Vientiane, who repeated that "rigid rules of procedures" had been adopted to prevent villages from being bombed. He conceded, however, that he had never sat down with the refugees and discussed the bombings.

Whitten also asked Sullivan's successor, Ambassador G. McMurtrie Godley, whether villages had been bombed. "The answer is negative," said Godley. If any villages had been hit, he added after Whitten recounted the refugees' stories, it was "infrequent" and "accidental."

Whitten used all the skill of a veteran investigative reporter to trip up any refugees who might have been lying. But there was no mistaking the honest pain in their faces as they told how U.S. bombs, napalm and rockets had been dumped upon their villages.

—Refugees' Stories—
They also attested that no Pathet Lao or North Vietnamese had been in their villages except in transit to buy at the market or to make brief propaganda speeches. Of several refugees interviewed by Whitten, only one had heard of a Pathet Lao soldier ever being injured in the raids. And this was merely a rumor.

Typical was the report of a 25-year-old refugee from Phong Savan, 150 miles from the Ho Chi Minh infiltration routes. There were no military facilities in his village, he said, "only a police station and a cooperative store that sold things. There were no Pathet Lao, no soldiers living there, only people."

"After 1964, many planes came. They dropped big bombs and napalm, ball-bearing bombs and rockets and..." He paused and said "ah-ah-ah-ah-ah" to indicate strafing.

"We had 100 houses in Phong Savan. By 1969, our houses were lost, only some posts standing out of the ground. We had 700 or 800 people in Phong Savan. Maybe 20 were killed and many injured."

"In June of 1968, my brother was killed. He was helping my father (a farmer) when the planes came at two o'clock in the afternoon. He was 19, but he did not get to the hole. There were chest wounds, and he died at three the next day. After that, my father cried all the time."

Whitten asked the young man if he understood the reasons for the bombings. At first, he didn't seem to understand, and the interpreter repeated the question. Finally, the refugee drew up his thin shoulders and said: "I don't know anything about politics. All I know is if the planes came, I hid, and if I didn't, I died."

—Rathole Existence—
Other refugees told similar stories. So terrible was the explosive downpour that villagers moved from their tattered thatch hovels into trenches dug in the sides of nearby hills. They lined the ditches with matting, but this didn't keep out the rains.

After the bombing of North Vietnam was halted in 1968, the raids weren't diminished; the planes simply were sent across the border into Laos. The bombing became so intensive that the villagers didn't dare come out of their rathole dwellings to work in their rice paddies except at night.

A 25-year-old refugee from a village near Khang Khay, 145 miles from the Ho Chi Minh trails, explained why the young and the old were caught most frequently by the U.S. raids:

"The children are always playing around and can't get to the trenches fast enough. The old men are like the children. They don't have good health. They can't hear when the planes come. Sometimes they can't get to safety."

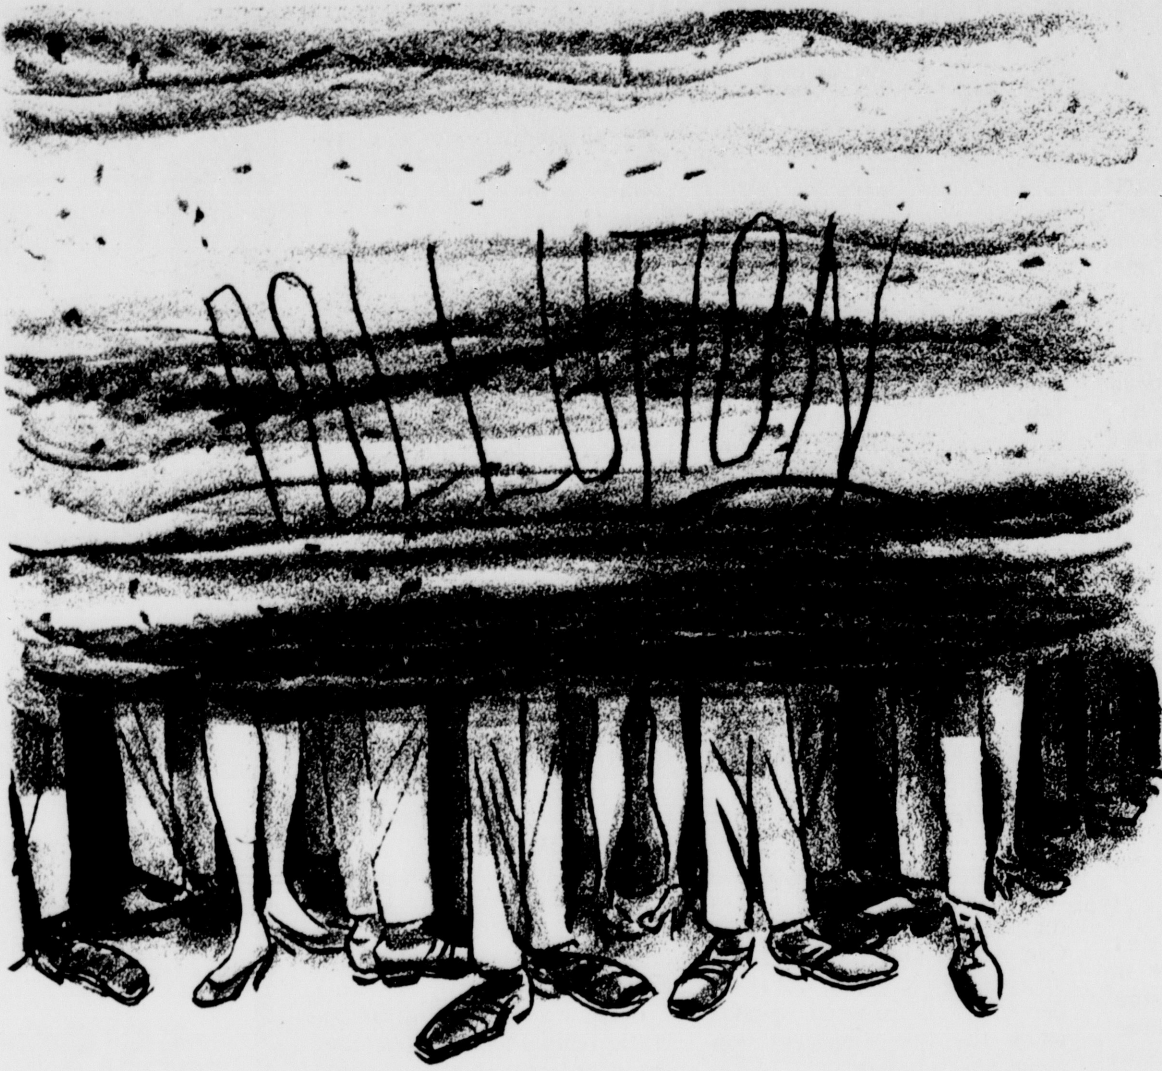

Footnote: Les Whitten taped his interviews with the refugees, whose reports contradict the sworn testimony of U.S. officials. This column will make the tapes available to any congressional committee, which may be interested in determining whether the administration is putting out false information.

—Republican Infiltrators—
The last place you would expect to find President Nixon's campaign manager and chief money raiser would be at a Democratic fund-raising affair.

Yet Attorney General John Mitchell, who ran Nixon's presidential campaign, and Secretary of Commerce Maurice Stans, who raised most of the money, put in an appearance the other evening at a cocktails-for-cash party to help fill a campaign chest for Rep. John Rooney, the crusty New York Democrat. What's more, the two eminent Republicans were accompanied by their No. 2 men, Deputy Attorney General Richard Kleindienst and Under Secretary of Commerce Rocco Siciliano. Stans alluded jokingly to his role as a Republican fund-raiser, and Mitchell told the Democratic contributors that he didn't know of a good Republican in Rooney's Brooklyn district.

As an aside to the political innocents who might not understand this strange Republican homage, Rooney happens to be chairman of the House Appropriations Subcommittee which controls the purse strings for the Justice and Commerce Departments. Spokesmen for Mitchell and Stans assured this column, however, that all four prominent Republicans were admitted to the cocktail party on complimentary tickets and weren't required to give Rooney any campaign contributions.

Ancient-Modern Jewish Coinage

For those readers who have written to ask about certain pieces of ancient Jewish coinage, we have come up with a very interesting collection of 2000-year-old coins of Israel. The set represents Jewish sovereignty from the year 103 B.C. to A.D. 70 and each piece has been authenticated by Israel's Kadman Numismatic Museum in Tel Aviv.

Six coins comprise a set and each is encased in a separate holder along with its modern-day counterpart and a complete description of the symbolism and background. One coin of Agrippa I bears the symbol of three ears of barley, which is also portrayed on the 1 agora coin of modern Israel. (Illustrated)

Two of the coins in this collection passed from hand to hand in trade within a lifetime of one of the most momentous periods of all Jewish history, the period of a successful revolt of the Maccabees against the forces of Antiochus IV who took the throne in 175 B.C.

One bronze coin of Herod the Great circulated during the rebuilding of the Temple. A fifth was issued during a period when Rome ended the custom of native rulers for Palestine in favor of appointed procurators responsible to the emperor.

The last coin in the set is a bronze of the period of the First Revolt against Rome, A.D. 66-70 which ended with the destruction of the Second Temple in Jerusalem, four years of an almost unbelievable "no-surrender" struggle.

Fred Bertram, editor and publisher of the Journal of Israel Numismatics, conceived the idea of making many of these coins available to American collectors. He was able to purchase 500 complete sets. Today there are fewer than 250 sets left. In a telephone conversation with Bertram, it was learned the journal will attempt to fill that number of orders.

"Owners will be able to see and touch money handled by the people who lived in those cataclysmic times and I felt such an experience was well worth the time and effort it took to have these sets collected and authenticated," was Bertram's reply to my question of why so few with a probable strong demand for such rarities.

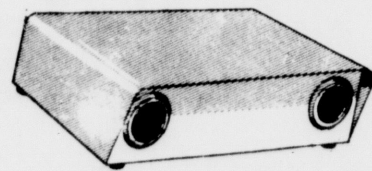

Interested readers can write for an illustrated prospectus and order form. Address inquiries to Fred Bertram, Journal of Israel Numismatics, Suite 4012, 866 United Nations Plaza, New York, N. Y. 10017.

Each set sells for $79.50 and contains a personalized insert registering the owner's name and for whom the coins were authenticated.

"Now Hear This—"

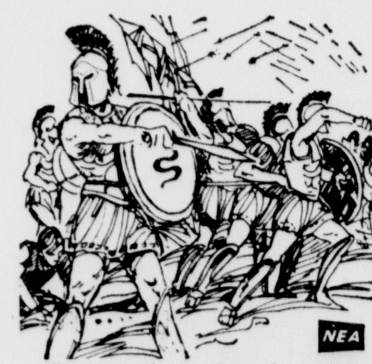

In this column recently we called attention to a new "wireless-foolproof" burglar and fire alarm that was in our opinion, an ideal accessory for protection of home or office. Since then the distributor has received several hundred letters requesting additional information on this Apache Alarm and the telephone relay attachment.

This relay is called "the little black box." It contains four emergency telephone numbers preprogrammed into the transmitter. When an intruder or fire alerts the "little black box," the alarm is triggered and, through a bypass connection on your phone, dials an emergency number to summon help.

Started Foundry
Joseph McClurg established the first foundry in Pittsburgh, Pa., in 1805. During the War of 1812, McClurg supplied cannon, howitzers, shells and balls to Commodore Oliver Perry on Lake Erie and to Gen. Andrew Jackson at New Orleans.

The ancient Greeks often sacrificed their lives rather than submit to tyranny. The World Almanac recalls the Battle of Thermopylae, where a small force of Greeks fought an estimated 180,000 Persians. On the third day, the Greek position became untenable when the Persians used a mountain path that enabled them to attack from behind. Although part of their force withdrew, about 1,100 Greeks remained to perish in the hopeless battle.

If you have been getting the impression from these articles that the negative double of one spade is the greatest invention since the wheel, take a look at today's hand.

West's spade overcall was somewhat on the sleazy side. If North had passed, East and West might have found their way to a successful three no-trump, an unsuccessful four spades or a part score. We'll never know because North did double. East might have redoubled to show some spades and good general strength, but he decided to jump to three spades.

This put it squarely up to South. He had a round opening bid with four hearts in addition to his five-card suit. He wouldn't have bid more than two hearts if he hadn't been jammed, but he wasn't going to be shut out. He bid four hearts.

West passed and East made one of those "money from home" doubles. It looked too good to be true.

West opened the 10 of hearts. He knew his partner could stand a trump lead. South struggled manfully but the best he could do was to take six tricks for a nice 1,100-point loss.

The chief blame for the tragedy rests on North's shoulders. He had four hearts but his hand was far too weak for a negative double. In addition his main strength was in the opponent's suit, not his own. You should have at least seven high-card points for a negative double and with a minimum seven or eight you should have all or nearly all of those points in your suits, not the enemy's.

South gets some blame. He didn't have to bid four hearts and East has to get some credit for his inspired three-spade bid that gave South the opportunity to take the disastrous plunge.

A Needle in Arm Is Worth Two in...

By BETTY CANARY

I am writing this as I sit in a hospital bed. I am beginning to think I have a hopeless case on my hands. The prognosis is definitely disheartening. Oh, I'm not talking about my physical condition! I came in here only for some tests. What is deteriorating is my determination to remain a person who, although hospitalized, still has power over her daily habits. Truth is, my will isn't deteriorating—it's in the last throes.

I have been in hospitals before and I've always been cheerful upon arrival, scattering sunshine as I wended my way through the corridors. In the past I would go hopping about being helpful, strewing sweet admonitions wherever I went. ("Let ME wind up that bed nurse. Goodness sakes alive, you must be worn out by this time of day!") The psychology is, if I am co-operative, they will love me. And probably take extra care in getting all the sponges out before closing the incision.

So much for psychology. I concluded that if they have rules, I have rules. Sitting here in my new pink nightgown, I have reached another conclusion. The big difference in their rules and my rules is that their rules are obeyed.

I posted my regulations at the door of my room. I started with a few general rules — "Remember! The hand that pushes the call button writes the checks" and went on to the more explicit, such as, "If awakened before 10:30 a.m., this patient will go for your throat."

Excuse me. The nurse is here. "Look," I say to her. "evidently you didn't read Rule No. 7. It says, 'Patient is not to be interrupted while reading or writing except for emergencies.'"

"We're going to have our shot," she replied. "Aha! Rule No. 3! You didn't read it either! Do you mean BOTH of us are going to have a shot or..."

"Us? We are to give us our left arm? O.K., nurses."

"Let's put our pen down and we'll put our book over here and turn our lights out."

"Don't be ridiculous. We, I mean, I know it's only 9 o'clock and sometimes I stay up until 2."

She is gone now. And I distinctly heard her say to the aide in the hall, "Number 23 is one of those. She sure had me fooled."

"Just goes to show," the aide said. "Even the ones wearing pink hair ribbons can turn on you."

Just goes to show, indeed. Obviously, neither of them read my Rule No. 10 which states, "Staff members will refrain from discussing patient while pretending she is not there."

The lights in my room just went off. I suppose they have a master switch somewhere. Well, I shall continue writing by the glow of the little night light there by my door. The night light is situated slightly to the left of where I posted my rules. Say, that doesn't look like my set of rules. They have fastened something over my poster. It's a placard. It says, "Do Not Disturb." It is signed, "The 3rd floor staff."

Avoid Infection Spread By Burning Dressings

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Q — What is staphylococcus? How is it picked up? What precautions may be taken to prevent its spread?

A — Staphylococcus is the name of the common pus-forming germ. It is often present on the skin and in the nose and does no harm until it enters the body through a break in the skin or mucous membrane. When you have a boil or an infected cut or bruise, it is important to burn the dressings and not to get the pus on your fingers because that is the quickest way to spread the infection to others or to another part of your body. It helps to wash your hands with a soap that contains hexachlorophene, especially after touching a soiled dressing.

Q — What is a whitlow or a felon and what is suppuration?

A — Whitlow and felon are the same thing — a pus infection of the bone, nail or pulp of the end of a finger. Suppuration is the formation of pus.

Q — What causes carbuncles? What can be done to prevent them?

A — A carbuncle is a glorified boil — one so large that it has more than one point of drainage. It is caused by a pus-forming germ, usually the staphylococcus. The precipitating cause is often the squeezing of a pimple, blackhead, wen or boil. Prevention is accomplished through cleanliness and prompt antiseptic treatment of all small cuts or skin infections.

Q — What is the best treatment for boils? My son, who is a mechanic, has five of them. He uses a soap prescribed by his doctor but so far it hasn't helped.

A — Multiple or repeated boils should be treated by a physician. To get them under control, an antibiotic, usually one of the penicillins, is given. In stubborn cases a weakened staphylococcus (strain 502A) is implanted on the skin and in the nose where it will overgrow and choke out the more vicious strain.

Q — If it is wise for a woman to have Pap tests shouldn't a man have a test for early cancer of the prostate?

A — A rectal digital examination is the simplest and most widely used way to detect cancer of the prostate, but many urologists have a Pap test made of the urinary sediment after a prostatic massage. They find this to be a valuable diagnostic procedure.

Report Reveals Middleman Gets Most of Food Dollar

By DON KENDALL, AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department economists have done some pencil work on retail food costs in relation to what farmers get and find that about three-fifths of what consumers spend for groceries goes to middlemen.

Further, says an Economic Research Service report, the middleman margin of "marketing spread" of food costs after raw products leave the farms is continuing to increase.

This means that despite farm price increases other costs of getting food into consumer hands are rising more rapidly, thus leaving farmers with about the same share of the housewife's food dollar they usually get.

Higher farm prices for some products last year—primarily livestock—did boost the farmer's share of the food dollar slightly, to 41 cents in 1969 or two cents more than the year before.

However, the ERS report shows, the low-mark during the decade of the 1960s was about 37 cents in 1963-64. Thus the farmer's share of the food dollar has varied upward only four cents despite rising consumers grocery prices each year.

Last year, the report said, the retail value of food originating on farms—not counting seafood or imports—averaged 4.9 per cent higher than in 1968. This included a 7.7 per cent average gain in prices of animal products and 1.6 per cent more for crop products.

At the same time, the report said, the farm-level value of these products averaged 9.7 per cent more last year, the largest year-to-year gain during the decade, and was 23 per cent more than the 1957-59 base.

In 1969 the marketing spread of costs to get products from farms to consumers rose 1.9 per cent and was 17 per cent more than in 1957-59.

Agriculture Department experts expect the margin to widen even more this year, the report said, because of rising costs.

An example of what it cost to market farm-food products was beef. Ten years ago the average retail price of choice beef was 77.4 cents per pound. Of this the farm value was 51.3 cents and middlemen costs 26.1 cents.

Last year choice beef averaged 96.3 cents, with farmers—spread among all producers, handlers, feeders, etc.—getting 62.2 cents and middlemen 34.1 cents.

Last year, consumers spent about $96 billion on farm-origin-

Ann Landers

'No' to Motherhood Should Be Praised

Dear Ann Landers: On occasion you have admitted you made a mistake and changed your advice. I hope you will do so again. I refer to your counsel to the woman who didn't want children and married a man who said he didn't want children either. Seven years later he changed his mind. She was furious and signed her letter "Betrayed." You advised counseling, called her "immature and selfish" — and she would probably lose the guy if she didn't grow up.

Well, she might be immature and selfish, but she is also honest enough to admit the mother role is not for her. And what's so terrible about that? I see many women who would be better off if they had made the same decision — and so would their unwanted, ignored children.

The most pressing problems in the world today are overpopulation and pollution. And the second problem is linked to the first. It is a known fact that people are the greatest polluters. The last thing the world needs is more people. So I pick up the paper and see where Ann Landers tells a gal to get counseling so she will be able to tolerate kids she doesn't even want!!! Please — eat those words. — Siding With Her

Dear Siding: Gulp, gulp, gulp. Consider the decision reversed. I would not, however, go so far as to agree with Paul Ehrlich's statement that "the mother of the year should be a sterilized woman — with two adopted children."

Dear Ann Landers: You have started quite a campaign.

Several of my friends who had never given it a thought are now seriously considering donating their bodies to medical schools. Since you seem so fond of Harvard Medical School, I've decided it's the one for me.

But what if they don't rush my remains to Cambridge in time? I've been told medical schools will not accept a body if more than twelve hours have elapsed. What if I can't get into Harvard? — Tears in Lorrain Ohio

Dear Lorain: Stop crying. Harvard will take you. They turn down only live people. Tell your lawyer, your doctor and the members of your family.

There are new laws based on the Uniform Anatomical Gift Act which has simplified donating organs — as well as the entire body. The donation card system is considered a legal instrument. The card is witnessed, signed and carried at all times. It designates which organs the carrier wishes to donate. Although this is not an easy topic for most people to dwell on, a great many individuals are overcoming their squeamishness and putting the welfare of humanity first. The gift of sight to a blind person or additional years of life to someone with kidney failure is an endowment beyond compare.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 15-year-old girl who is worried about my 17-year-old brother. A girl in my class is crazy about him and she won't let him alone. To look at this sex bomb you'd think she was 20. Her parents are divorced and she lives with her dad in a nifty apartment. Her dad is never in town. She drives his car all over and has a perfect setup — including a well stocked liquor cabinet.

This tramp chases my brother night and day and he seems to enjoy it. His attitude is "What do I have to lose?" I worry about him. What can I do? — Little Sis

Dear Sis: You can tell him what he has to lose: A paternity suit, a bout with V.D., chances for a good education and marrying the girl of his choice — when HE wants to get married.

Public Housing Test Is Coming

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court may rule Monday on a California case that could have national bearing on the legal rights of poor people and the pace of public housing construction across the country.

At issue is a 1950 amendment to the California constitution giving state residents a veto over public housing projects in their area.

The amendment bars low-rent housing construction by cities or counties unless the project is approved by majority vote of area residents.

Papers filed with the court indicate similar legislation exists in Minnesota, Nebraska, South Dakota, Texas, Vermont and Virginia.

Up for action by the justices is an appeal by the city of San Jose of a ruling by a federal court in San Francisco that held the amendment unconstitutional.

The San Jose city council, by a 6-1 vote, found a need in 1966 for low-rent housing in the community, established a housing authority and put before the voters in 1968 a proposal to construct up to 1,000 units in various sections of the city.

The measure was defeated when 57,896 votes were cast for it and 68,527 against.

A group of welfare recipients living in overcrowded facilities sued in federal court, claiming the amendment was discriminatory and unconstitutional. They pointed to exemptions in the amendment excusing the need for voter approval of federally owned housing and housing for public employees and university students.

The decision by the three-judge court, as given by district Judge Robert F. Peckham, agreed, saying California could not make assistance for the poor more difficult to obtain than assistance for other groups.

San Jose's appeal argues this concept of equality should not be applied to public housing, which it contends is a benefit, not a right, with voters entitled to decide whether the benefits should be extended.

Size Up Mental Health With This Quickie Quiz

NEW YORK (AP) — Have you been worrying lately about whether you are mentally normal?

If you are really interested in learning whether you're batty or just confused, simply answer the following questions:

Do you believe that the Internal Revenue Service deliberately writes its tax forms in bafflegab so that, no matter how you fill them out, you are still at the government's mercy?

When you thought no one would see you, did you ever as a child pull a cat's tail just to see what would happen?

Are you convinced that you had a greater respect and a deeper love for your father and mother than your children have for theirs? But in your heart of hearts, wouldn't you grudgingly agree that one reason for this perhaps, is that you had better parents than they do?

Don't you get a bigger kick out of getting something for nothing than you do by working or paying for it?

When someone gives you your comeuppance in public, do you brood for three days trying to think up the perfect squelcher that would have put him in his place?

Are you annoyed if a fellow you lend your newspaper to on a commuter train quickly completes the crossword puzzle you were unable to fill out?

And you fret now and then, too, don't you, over the melancholy realization that you are really about as indispensable at the office as a paper cup?

It kind of peps you up, though, doesn't it, to see how much more your old friends seem to have aged than you?

And when you attend a college reunion, don't you get a snobbish feeling of smugness to note that four of your classmates who got better grades than you are now driving cars smaller and three years older than yours?

Do you feel a bit guilty because you can't spell Phnom Penh, Kuala Lumpur and Vientiane, and are unable to tell off-hand which countries they are in? Don't you sometimes get so mixed-up that you wish our country didn't have a foreign policy at all—if it does?

Our domestic policy has you a bit puzzled, too, eh? Isn't it hard for you to figure whether, basically, our best goal is to integrate the desegregation or segregate the distintegration?

If you answered yes to all of them, you are as normal as the vast majority of your fellow Americans, muddled but still functioning.

If you answered no to all of them—well, have you ever considered seeking a government job?

Hospital Chain Is a Success

ERIN, Tenn. (AP) — Deep in the Cumberland River Hills, the only two doctors in the town were ready to pack their black bags and leave.

After a decade of delivering babies in a red brick office, then turned down for federal aid in their efforts to build a hospital, the doctors were tired and discouraged.

But today this dusty little county seat of 1,100 persons has a gleaming new hospital that cost nearly $1 million.

Built by a private chain without government help, the 36-bed hilltop hospital has special heart equipment, modern operating facilities and has even lured a new surgeon to town.

And it's making a profit. Hospital Corporation of America, a seven-state private chain that is only three years old, has found a way to bring new hospitals to rural regions, keep rates relatively low in an era of skyrocketing medical costs, and still make it pay off.

A streamlined central administrative staff, large discounts for buying supplies for a 26-hospital chain, and a careful eye for economy have helped keep costs down.

But HCA and the other privately owned chains in the new health-for-profit hospital field in the South and West have not found a way to escape controversy.

Rival non-profit hospitals in many cities accuse the private chains of skimming off the best-paying patients, turning away the poor, and keeping an eye on stock trends rather than medical charts. The chains deny the charges.

In the last few years, since medicare and medicaid pumped billions in federal funds into the health field, profit-making hospital chains have sprung up from coast to coast to challenge the sometimes inefficient hospitals traditionally run by county or church.

The hospital stocks soared astronomically on the market at first, but now the slump of recent months has sapped the glamor of the stocks, sending prices skidding steeply and stirring a crisis in the industry.

The slump came just as HCA was beginning to open up the vanguard of its newly built hospitals, mainly in rural areas. Strung together originally like other national chains through buying up older hospitals, HCA is in the midst of an ambitious building program from Florida to Kentucky.

Erin's hospital, the showpiece, was the first new facility to open last summer. It stays four-fifths full, can draw on top medical specialists through the HCA headquarters in Nashville, and has a room rate of $28 a day—half as high as New York or Boston or Los Angeles.

HCA keeps its costs down by using the same basic plans for its hospitals, buying at bulk discounts on everything from steel to syringes, and demanding efficiency. It is saving $200,000 alone in discounts for the steel going into new hospitals being built in Chattanooga, Tenn.; Macon, and Albany, Ga.

The main key to making money in the chains is a fast turnover of patients. Hospital costs for most patients anywhere are highest in the first few days, particularly if surgery is involved. The chains often trim the time spent in bed afterwards and send patients home earlier.

Thus the chains have a higher over-all income per day from a patient—$128 a day in one profit-making hospital in Santa Ana, Calif., compared with the Blue Cross average of $102 for the whole Los Angeles area.

Scout News

Thirty Boy Scouts and Explorers from this area will leave Aug. 3 for a trip in the mountains of Philmont Scout Ranch and Explorer Base in northeastern New Mexico.

The group, representing the Lake of the Ozarks Council, Boy Scouts of America, will travel to Philmont by bus, according to Jerry Dempsey, Scout Executive.

At the 214-square-mile ranch, the expedition will meet their ranger who will lead and train them on the trails for the first three days of their ten-day outing.

On the Philmont trails the Scouts and Explorers will participate in various programs including earth science, gold panning, mining, rock climbing, archaeological study and digging, burro packing, and horseback riding.

USAC Sprint Cars To Race at Odessa

ODESSA — Six drivers who competed in the Indianapolis 500 on Memorial Day, are scheduled to appear Friday night at I-70 Speedway, in the United States Auto Club's sprint car show.

From the Indy race will come Carl Williams of Grandview, Mo., who finished ninth; Sam Sessions of Nashville, Mich., who was 12th; Gary Bettenhausen, the son of the late Tony Bettenhausen; Bruce Walkup of St. Paul, Ind.; Greg Weld, Kansas City, who blew an engine early in the race; and Jim Malloy, who hit the wall on the parade lap of the Memorial Day Classic.

According to track general manager John Hughes, the pilots are all ready to roar over the half-mile asphalt oval.

The race will include the current leader in the sprint car division of USAC — Larry Dickson of Marietta, Ohio. Dickson was the division winner in the sprinters in 1968 and the runner-up last year to Bettenhausen.

Greg Weld, an area favorite, who moved through the ranks of the International Motor Contest Association before joining USAC, was the champion of the sprint car division in 1967.

In all, some 30 sprint car pilots are expected for Friday night's show.

Other headliners include Sonny Ates of Sellersburg, Ind., who on Aug. 3, 1968, set a one-lap world record for the half-mile on a paved track. That mark was established at Dayton, Ohio; the time set by Ates was 16.81 (107.079 mph).

Rollie Beale and Karl Busson, both of Toledo, Ohio, have pre-entered; young Lee Kunzman of Guttenberg, Iowa; Tom Bigelow of Whitewater, Wis.; and Don Nordhorn of Wadesville, Ind., are among other drivers who have pre-entered the race.

Included in the six-race program will be a 40-lap feature, trophy dash and four heat races.

Hughes said Thursday that he expected 11 of the top 12 current point leaders in the sprint car division to appear in tonight's show.

Larry Dickson, with a total of 330 points, leads the sprint competition. He is followed by Gary Bettenhausen (228), Sam Sessions (146), Rollie Beale (141) and Lee Kunzman (136).

I-70 racing officials announced early this week that the dedication of the track itself will be held Friday night also. The high-banked, asphalt track opened last August. Circuit Judge Phil H. Cook of Lexington will do the official honors of cutting the ribbon.

Races will begin at 7 p.m., when the time trials get underway — heat races are slated to begin at 8 p.m.

The USAC pilots will be competing for a total purse of $6,500.

Rooker Holds NY Hitless For Eight, But KC Falls

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Rooker turned away from the mound with the crack of the bat, watched the ball skip in front of left fielder Lou Piniella and then stared out at the empty bleacher seats in Yankee Stadium.

The sag in his shoulders was barely discernible, but the Number 13 on the back of his sweatstreaked shirt loomed larger than life.

Rooker, a 27-year-old left-hander whose previous pitching achievements hadn't matched his hitting prowess, came within three outs Thursday night of hurling the first no-hitter in the Kansas City Royals' brief history — and the first at the stadium since Don Larsen's perfect World Series game 14 years ago.

But Horace Clarke lined a single to left on Rooker's first pitch in the ninth inning. Bobby Murcer followed with a gamely-timed double and New York went on to nip Rooker and the Royals 2-1 on Clarke's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the 12th.

"I knew what was going on," Rooker said of the near-miss, "but I just wanted to get them out in the ninth. I really didn't care if they got a hit. I wanted the game."

"After the first hit, I was glad it was over. I just tried to reach back and get something on the ball ... if there was anything left."

But Murcer, after fouling off two bunt attempts, sent Clarke home from first with a one-hop shot to the scoreboard right center. Rooker, weary but dead-game, struggled on until the 12th, when he was lifted with the bases loaded and one out.

Clarke greeted reliever Moe Drabowsky with the winning fly ball to center.

"I was in the dugout at the end," Rooker said. "I was out there for 11 innings, so I figure I might as well stay around for the last one."

"I did my job, but we couldn't score any runs. So I'll remember this game as a loss, that's all. And they don't pay me for losing."

"It was the same all last year," said Rooker's catcher, Ellie Rodriguez. "Every time he pitched, we'd score one run or two. No more."

Rooker, who suffered through a nightmarish 4-16 rookie season with the American League expansion club, broke the losing habit this spring with a 3-2 get-away, driving in five runs in one victory and the winning marker in another.

The former minor league outfielder had batted .281 in 1969, but among his mound misfortunes were eight one-run set-backs. "After last season, I don't need a sophomore jinx," he said. "Things were going so bad. I asked for No. 13 just to try to break it up."

For eight innings, the Yanks didn't come close to getting Rooker's number. They managed just four base-runners on three walks and the pitcher's throwing error ... until Clarke's hit broke the spell.

"Jim didn't tire," said Rodriguez. "Clarke hit a letter-high fastball, but we'd been getting

'Putt In' Begins Saturday Morning

Larry Emery, a radio announcer at KSIS Radio, begins his 'putt in' at 9 a.m., Saturday. Emery will putt a golf ball from in front of the station's studios on North Highway 65, through downtown Sedalia on Ohio Street, continue on to 16th Street, and then on to Walnut Hills Golf Course.

The course is approximately seven and one-half miles from the radio station.

A contest is also being held in conjunction with the 'putt in'; the first place prize is one year's free golfing at the new 18-hole, grass green golf course.

"I wanted that hit," Clarke said. "I played in the minors with a team that got no-hitted once. I don't like the feeling at all."

LINCOLN — The Houstonia S-M softball team split a doubleheader with Lincoln Wednesday night.

Lincoln took the first contest, 10-8 on the winning pitching effort of Meyer. Hicks took the loss for Houstonia.

In the second contest, Sevier pitched no-hit ball for six innings and ended the game by only allowing two hits to be tagged off him, in S-M's 13-2 romp.

Expect To Draft 1,000

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball's free agent draft, a process that divides the nation's school boys and collegians among the 24 big league clubs and their farms, will conclude Friday with over 1,000 in the fold.

The annual summer draft (they call the mid-term class in January) opened Thursday. After 27 rounds, a total of 649 had been selected.

After the players are drafted they must be signed and the clubs already have been warned by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn that "real honest-to-God negotiations must be undertaken within 15 days after the young men are eligible."

The draft only gives the club the exclusive bargaining right to the athlete. If he does not sign now, he goes back into the pool for later selection, depending on his eligibility at the time.

Many of the draftees already have graduated from high school and are eligible for immediate signing. It is the same story for college grads (unless their school still has some games on its schedule) and anybody who has passed his 21st birthday and not signed. Steve Dunning, Cleveland's top draft from Stanford University, said Thursday he expected to sign immediately.

Sons of such former major leaguers as Roy Sievers (Robin, drafted by a St. Louis farm) and Hank Greenberg (Steven of Yale) drafted by a Washington farm were among those chosen on the first day.

Jennie Jaynes To Host Meet

Weather permitting, Jennie Jaynes Stadium will play host to the A.A.U. Junior Olympics Saturday beginning at 8:30 a.m.

According to meet director Paul Klover, more than 800 boys and girls from Central Missouri are expected to participate.

Preliminaries for the day's activities will be held in the morning, with the afternoon and evening hours being devoted to the finals in each event.

Last year, 708 boys and girls took part in the Sedalia meet.

Jennie Jaynes will also play host to the Missouri finals, June 20.

Boys and girls in all divisions, who qualify in the top five slots in each event will qualify for the state meet.

Qualifying meets, similar to the one in Sedalia Saturday, will be held in Missouri before June 20.

Rites For Sawchuk Are Held

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Terry Sawchuk, the all-time hockey great who died Sunday under tragic circumstances, was to be buried today in a Pontiac cemetery.

Marcel Pronovost, former Red Wing star, one of Sawchuk's closest friends during their playing days together in Detroit, and Bob Kinnear, the man who discovered Sawchuk on the frozen ponds of Winnipeg, were to be among the pallbearers.

A funeral mass for Sawchuk was to be said at 10 a.m. Friday at Our Lady of LaSalette Church in the Detroit suburb of Berkley, with burial at Mount Hope Cemetery in nearby Pontiac.

Meanwhile Sawchuk's former wife Pat discounted a report that Terry began fighting with New York Ranger teammate Ron Stewart because he was despondent after a reconciliation attempt failed.

In an interview with a Detroit newspaper, Mrs. Sawchuk said she and Terry were "on the best of terms" when she last saw him in April. Sawchuk was in Pontiac at the time visiting his ailing father.

When he left, she said "he kissed the kids good-bye and we were on the best of terms."

Mrs. Sawchuk said when she learned of Sawchuk's injury 10 days after it happened, she sent a letter, a card and pictures of the children with their oldest boy, Gerald, 15, who went to New York to be with his father.

"Gerald said the card and picture gave his dad a real boost," she said.

In New York, Dr. Denis F. Nicholson of Long Beach, was quoted in the New York Post as having said that Sawchuk told him: "I started it and I finished it" — referring to his brawl with Stewart April 29 that led to the removal of Sawchuk's gall bladder.

Complications arose and Sawchuk died following his third operation early last Sunday. He was 40.

The top four times and distances in the state meet in the intermediate (16-18) and senior divisions (18-over) will be allowed to participate in the District A.A.U. meet at Haskell Institute, Haskell, Kan., June 27.

From there, the top four finishers in each event will move on to the Region VIII meet in Conway, Ark., July 18.

Royals Owner Would Offer Flood More Than $125,000

NEW YORK (AP) — If Curt Flood had been freed to negotiate for himself after he was traded by the St. Louis Cardinals, it is very possible that he might be in the Kansas City outfield today playing for the Royals at a salary in excess of $125,000 a year.

The man who would have paid Flood that much is Ewing Kauffman, a multi-millionaire owner of the Royals dedicated to bringing Kansas City a pennant no matter how high the cost—including the $4 million he offered Oakland in two trade proposals.

Kauffman, who in 1950 began a pharmaceutical firm in his basement stirred the courtroom of Judge Irving Ben Cooper as he testified Thursday in the suit brought by Flood that challenges the legality of baseball's reserve system.

First he caused a ripple of excitement among the spectators by estimating that if he could have negotiated with Flood, he would have paid him in the $100,000 to $125,000 range for one year and might have increased that figure on a long-term contract.

Second, he sent a ripple through the court room by revealing that he had made two million-dollar proposals in the last two years to purchase players from the Athletics, presumably including such stars as Reggie Jackson, Sal Bando and Rick Monday.

Kauffman, called as a defense witness for baseball, made his statements about what he would pay Flood under cross-examination by attorney Jay Topkis. It was considered significant in light of Flood's contention that baseball operates in restraint of trade through the reserve system.

Questioning along those lines, according to Topkis in remarks made to Judge Cooper, also was a "way to prove damages" in the $3 million anti-trust suit brought by Flood after he was traded by St. Louis to the Philadelphia Phillies.

Kauffman's estimate of what he would pay Flood if he could negotiate with the outfielder was significantly higher than the $90,000 Flood was paid by the Cardinals in 1969, or the package of "a little more" than $90,000 plus $8,000 expenses offered by the Phillies for 1970.

Kauffman, however, was and is barred from negotiating with Flood by baseball's reserve clause, which ties a player to the club that originally signed him until he is either traded, sold or released. Flood became Philadelphia property when he was traded.

At that time, Flood asked Commissioner Bowie Kuhn for permission to negotiate for himself as a free agent with any club in baseball. Kuhn said he could not give such permission, and Flood instituted suit.

No less interesting than Kauffman's estimate of Flood's value on the open market was his revelation under direct examination of the two deals he had offered A's owner Charles O. Finley for unspecified players.

Kauffman said he made the first proposal before the 1969 season, offering $1 million to pick any one player from the Oakland roster. The second proposal was made prior to the current season. Kauffman offering

$3 million for his pick of four players off the Oakland roster.

Kauffman, however, under direct examination did specify that he thought it would be detrimental to baseball—although beneficial to Kansas City—if he could go into a completely open market and bid for players.

He said while he was prepared to do so, other teams were not, and it would therefore be "bad for baseball" because a few teams would wind up with the best player.

Asked why he was willing to spend the money while others weren't Kauffman replied:

"They don't have it."

Kauffman, however, does and is willing to spend it in his efforts to bring the Royals a pennant. He testified that he had paid $6 million for the expansion club and estimated he had put another $3.5 million in during the last two years.

Chiefs Sign First Choice From Draft

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs have signed their No. 1 draft choice, Sid Smith, 1969 second team All-American offensive tackle from Southern California.

Smith's signing was announced Thursday by Coach Hank Stram, who did not disclose terms in keeping with policy of the Chiefs not to reveal such figures.

Stram said Smith has recovered "extremely well from his knee operation."

He also made a key point for the defense by saying he would not have made his original investment in the Royals without the reserve system and baseball's immunity to federal anti-trust laws.

Brazil, England Are Set

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The World Cup soccer matches here are boosting tea sales in Britain, raising electricity bills in Spain and starting husband-and-wife arguments in West Germany, even if they aren't attracting much notice in the United States.

There was no action Thursday or today in the four groups from which eight teams will be selected for the quarter-finals after round-robin competition.

The next big game is Sunday when England, the defending champion, duels powerful Brazil. There are four games on tap Saturday and another four Sunday.

Saturday's schedule: Russia vs. Belgium. Uruguay vs. Italy. Rumania vs. Czechoslovakia and Peru vs. Morocco. In addition to the English-Brazilian match Sunday, Mexico plays El Salvador. Israel opposes Sweden and Bulgaria battles West Germany.

From Manchester to Munich, from Milan to Madrid, millions of Europeans are sitting up for hours after their normal bedtime to watch the soccer series on television.

"By the time the championships are over (June 21), half the continent will be stumbling to work in a stupor, bleary-eyed from their television sets," complained a British bank manager Thursday—stifling a yawn from watching Brazil play Czechoslovakia until one o'clock in the morning.

In Western Europe the games are telecast live from Mexico. In the Soviet Union, the games are shown later on tape—but even in Russia the radio broadcasts World Cup scores 24 hours a day.

British shopkeepers report that with the games only five days old, housewives already have started to buy more tea and other drinks for the late-night television watching.

Electricity authorities in Madrid say that with television sets running until late into the night, the demand for power has soared. In Britain electricity consumed in one night increased by 2 million kilowatt hours.

Eight Vie At Belmont

NEW YORK (AP) — Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Personality takes on his eighth assignment in 10 weeks and Raymond M. Curtis' My Dad George gets a chance at a dubious precedent Saturday in the 102nd running of the $125,000-added Belmont Stakes.

Personality, who made up somewhat for his eighth-place finish in the Kentucky Derby by winning the Preakness, will be trying for his fourth big stakes victory in his last five starts.

A second-place finish for My Dad George would make him the first to finish second in all three Triple Crown races. Arts and Letters was runnerup to Majestic Prince in the Derby and Preakness last year but he missed setting the precedent—happily for owner Paul Mellon and traiper Elliott Burch—by winning the Belmont.

Seven 3-year-olds were expected to go against Personality and My Dad George in the Belmont—Mrs. Jacobs' High Echelon, Dansar Stable's Delaware Chief, El Peco Ranch's Aggressively, Thomas Fleming's Needles N Pens, Brookmeade Stable's Climber, Briardale Farm's Stop Time and Lawrence Boche's Hark The Lark.

Missing from the final jewel of the Triple Crown is Kentucky Derby winner Dust Commander who came up with a sore ankle after finishing ninth in the Preakness.

If nine start in the 1½-mile Belmont, the gross purse will be $157,250, with $113,500 to the winner.

Post time is approximately 5:30 p.m. EDT, with television coverage by CBS from 5-6 p.m.

Told of his chance to set a racing first, Bud McManus, trainer of My Dad George, said: "I'm not thinking of second. The hell with second. I want first."

The Belmont will be My Dad George's first start since the Preakness May 16.

On the other hand, Personality made his last start just six days ago when he was an impressive winner of the Jersey Derby.

A probable field of eight, including Quicken Tree and Baffle, will be racing in the $50,000-added Inglewood Handicap at Hollywood Park Saturday. Quicken Tree, with Fernando Alvarez up, won the $145,000 Santa Anita Handicap and Baffle, with Jerry Lambert in the saddle, recently won the $112,800 California. The race for 3-year-olds and up is 1 and ½ miles.

A field of seven, headed by War Censor, Jungle Cove and Dinner Gong, will be on tap for the $35,000-added Custer Memorial Stakes for 3-year-olds and up at Suffolk Downs.

Pattee Canyon, Stay Out Front and Foggy Note head a possible field of 12 in Arlington Park's $25,000-added Twilight Tear Handicap, a one-mile effort on grass for fillies and mares.

Ten horses, with I've Been Spotted high-weighted at 120, are entered in Golden Gate Fields' $20,000-added San Juan Bautista Handicap, a mile and 1-16th stakes event.

Some 20 three-year-olds are slated as possible starters in the $25,000-added Kent Stakes Handicap at Delaware Park. Tatoi, ridden Bill Hartack and Cut The Comedy, with Helodoro Gustines aboard, are in the field.

In the $25,000-added Dragoon Stakes for 2-year-olds racing five furlongs at Liberty Bell, it'll be Beau Charge, Royal Jeep, Buffare and Brazen Brother, among others.

Kemper Has Two In Lead

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Gibby Gilbert, easily the biggest surprise on the pro golf tour this year, says he's "reaching for the stars," while veteran Lionel Hebert says he's ready to make a comeback.

The two longshots barged into the first-round lead in the $150,000 Kemper Open Golf Tournament Thursday, matching 66s on the rain-drenched 7,231 yards, par 72 Quail Hollow Country Club Course.

Hebert, a portly, 42-year-old who scored the last of his five victories in 1966, said he is "playing a lot better now."

"I had some problems the last couple of years, but about four months ago I got those solved and now I have no excuses. I think I'm ready for a good summer. I'm ready to make a comeback."

Hebert, a drawing native of the Louisiana Cajun country, won the PGA National Championship in 1957 but has been bothered by tendonitis in both arms for the last two years. He said it no longer troubles him.

The 29-year-old Gilbert, a former club pro, played the tour during the summer for the last couple of years, broke into the top 20 only once and decided to abandon it last fall.

"But I played good in some local tournaments around Miami and Fort Lauderdale in the winter," he said, "and decided I'd give it one more try."

"I quit my job. I'd never done that before. Maybe it gave me more determination. All I know is I'm out here reaching for the stars."

He started his first full year on the tour at Doral in Florida in February, finished seventh, started the golfing world with a playoff victory in the Houston Champions International and has picked up almost $34,000 in winnings this season.

Pacifist Mood Is Called Threat to U.S. Supremacy

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford said today the Soviet Union's calculated exploitation of American antiwar sentiment could eliminate the United States as a global power without a shot being fired.

The growing pacifist mood over Vietnam, Ford said, has spawned a new isolationism and prompted Americans to think it "abhorrent to take great risks involved in acting like a global power."

This, he said, is playing into the hands of Soviet strategists whose "objective has always been the same—to destroy the United States" will to resist.

In a speech prepared for graduation exercises of the National War College at Ft. McNair, the Michigan congressman cited the Prussian military theorist, Von Clausewitz, who wrote the purpose of war is not the physical destruction of the enemy but the destruction of the enemy's will to resist.

"It is in Indochina that the Soviet Union has come closest to destroying the U.S. will to resist," Ford said.

"We have seen a rise in pacifist sentiment, skillfully exploited by American subversives and revolutionaries. We have seen continuing demands that U.S. military spending be cut below the point of marginal risk," he added.

"A strong wave of neo-isolationism has swept over a segment of the American people—notably many of our college students and some members of the United States Congress.

"The basis for the new isolationism is the growing feeling among the American people that the game has never been worth the candle in Vietnam," he said.

However, he said, Americans should remember that in Vietnam the United States has been at war with Russia by proxy.

The Kremlin has sought to make Vietnam a Communist bridgehead from which new offensive operations could be launched against non-Communist states, he said.

Whether in Vietnam, Cuba or the Middle East, he added, the Soviets have had only one objective—to destroy the United States will to resist.

"There is no logic in blaming the military for the tragedy in Vietnam," he said. "The responsibility for the critical misjudgments in Vietnam in the 60s lies with the civilian leadership of the nation."

"Within the limitations that they set for the military it was impossible to attain early and traditional success in the Vietnam war. It became an American war and yet selective response remained the basic strategy."

Ford said the United States properly employed its power in attacking Communist sanctuaries in Cambodia.

"This is the kind of use of power that the Communists understand and respect," he said.

'Self-Defense' Reason For Jackson Shootings

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Gov. John Bell Williams says a state investigation showed police acted in self-defense in killing two young Negroes during a confrontation with students at Jackson State College.

In a television report Thursday night, the governor said officers were fired on by snipers before opening up with a fusillade of 200 to 300 rifle and shotgun rounds May 15.

Officers fired only after encountering physical assaults, gunfire and verbal abuse, Williams said, and any blame should fall "on the peacebreakers—not on the peacekeepers."

Students at the predominantly Negro school have denied police reports of campus sniping and the governor's report brought swift reaction.

"Just another do-nothing speech," said Charles Evers, Negro mayor of Fayette and a civil rights leader. "He has no feeling at all for black people."

The Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said Negro leaders would seek equal TV time to "tell it like it is."

'Bracken' Adjusting To Times

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Can "Bracken's World" keep up with the fast-moving world of Hollywood? Producer Stanley Rubin thinks so, and he's making changes in the television series accordingly.

"Bracken's World" had a rocky start in its first season on NBC. Some critics scoffed that its portrayal of life inside a major studio was both soap-operatic and anachronistic. Eleanor Parker, the series' principal star, walked out in midseason with the claim that she had little to do.

Ratings were disappointing. The audience seemed confused by the immense cast—11 regulars in all. But as the performers became more familiar, the ratings began to rise. Although "Bracken's World" remained far from a hit, NBC was enough encouraged to renew the 20th Century-Fox production for the 1970-71 season.

The series, some say, portrays life as they used to be—big, busy, aswam with actors. Since it began, Hollywood has fallen on hard times. Production is a trickle, studio contract lists all but nil. Independent turn out much of the product.

The biggest change in the series will be to bring studio boss John Bracken onstage—in the first season he was merely a shadowy figure whose decisions were delivered like messages from Mt. Olympus. Bracken will be portrayed by Leslie Nielsen.

"The way we see him," said Rubin, "is not as a Harry Cohn, a Jack Warner, a Louis B. Mayer or any of the old-time studio bosses. He is a man who has grown up in the movie business, is now in his mid-40s, and has been a film maker himself, in charge of European production."

"He has gone to college and is cosmopolitan in his outlook. He is the new breed of studio head, like a John Calley (Warners), a Richard Zanuck (Fox), or a Bob Evans (Paramount)."

Postal Reform Package Hits House Next Week

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration's postal reform legislation makes its debut on the House floor next week, a year—and the nation's first postal strike—after it was sent to Congress.

The bill calls for a massive overhaul of the Post Office into a semi-autonomous agency able to set its own rates, wages and investment plans.

Action on the measure, which carries an 8 per cent pay hike for postal workers, is expected to head off renewed talk of a second walkout because of Congressional inaction.

The Senate is expected to consider a similar reorganization bill later this summer. Postmaster General Winton M. Blount, speaking informally to newsmen Wednesday, expressed hope the legislation could be approved by fall.

Passage of the postal reform package would conclude a drive begun three years ago when then Postmaster General Lawrence F. O'Brien proposed a postal corporation, declaring the 200-year-old Post Office "in a race with disaster."

That conclusion was echoed a year later by a presidential commission. The Nixon administration introduced its reform legislation May 1969.

Neither the House nor the Senate bill conforms exactly with the legislation submitted by the administration last year. But Blount said differences are of a technical, rather than substantive nature.

"When we first submitted the legislation, we said there were four basic things we wanted in a postal reform bill: control of our investment policy, control of our costs, proper control of our income or rates and continuity of management."

"Our feet weren't set in concrete as far as form as long as these four principles were preserved. These are principles that we will not compromise on."

Even though Congress appears likely to pass the reform legislation, the administration has received one setback: proposals for higher postage rates seem doomed this year.

In the interview, Blount did not consider passage of the rate increases a condition for acceptance of the reform and pay hike package.

Under either Senate or House bills, the new postal service would be divorced completely from the President's cabinet and be run by a board appointed by the President.

The board, in turn, would hire a manager to run the service on a day-to-day basis.

Rates would be set by a rate commission, also appointed by the President. Proposed new rates need approval of the board and, in the House version, could be vetoed by a majority vote in either chamber within 90 days.

Salaries for postal workers, now set by Congress, would be subject to negotiations between management and the postal unions. Other than the right to strike, the postal workers would have all labor rights accorded workers in private industry.

Both bills allow the management of the new postal service to issue up to $10 billion in general obligation bonds to finance new buildings and equipment. Currently, money for such purposes is doled out by Congress.

Food Imports Pesticide Angle Up For Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House agriculture subcommittee opens hearings next week on a proposal to ban the importation of foods treated with pesticides restricted in the United States.

Agriculture Committee chairman W.R. Poage, D-Tex., sponsor of the bill, said today the prohibition is designed to protect consumers from possible health dangers and eliminate unfair economic competition from abroad.

"It would be illogical and unacceptable to provide consumers with only partial protection from whatever dangers may be inherent in using certain pesticides," said Poage.

"If it is determined that a chemical is detrimental to a person's health, then he should not be exposed to it on foods grown in either this country or abroad."

In addition, Poage said, it would be unfair to restrict domestic farmers' use of some pesticides while allowing competitive items in from overseas without the same limits.

He noted competition from abroad is already severe because laborers in other lands are paid less than U.S. workers.

He said his bill would prohibit imports of foods from any country unless the President has determined the nation involved enforces antipesticide restrictions at least equal to those applicable in the United States.

The hearings will begin Monday before a subcommittee chaired by Rep. Eligio de la Garza, D-Tex.

Big Leap Predicted For School Mixing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's top civil rights enforcer in a report characterized as premature by Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, says nearly all black children in the South may attend desegregated schools next fall.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Jerris Leonard, head of the Justice Department's civil rights division, said the integration efforts hinge on the Nixon administration's enforcement plans.

If the plans go well, Leonard said Thursday in a report to a Cabinet committee on school desegregation headed by Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, "about 97 per cent of the Negro children in these 11 Southern states will be attending desegregated school systems."

Before the beginning of the last school year, Leonard said, "only 5.2 per cent of 164,273 of the 3.1 million Negro public school students in those 11 states attended schools in unitary or desegregated school systems."

The report, which Leonard termed "dramatic," was distributed to reporters by the Justice Department's public information office but taken back 35 minutes later.

Mitchell then called newsmen into his office and said the report's conclusions were based on raw—and in some instances inaccurate—data. He said its release was premature and had been submitted to the Cabinet panel as a working paper rather than a final report.

The attorney general said Leonard's figures of 97 per cent depended on a number of "imponderables," such as the outcome of pending suits and negotiations between the government and Southern school districts.

Leonard said there are 72 segregated or dual school systems in 11 Southern states that are not under court order, voluntary planning to desegregate, or being sued by the department.

A department spokesman said those districts will be faced with desegregation suits if they do not develop integration plans for next fall.

A memorandum from Leonard accompanying the report included desegregation percentages but made no mention of the statewide desegregation suits he once said might be filed in five Southern states. Such a suit, aimed at state education officials rather than those in local districts, has been filed in Georgia.

The Washington Post reported in today's editions the Nixon administration has won desegregation agreements from enough districts in four of the five states that statewide suits there are now unlikely.

The Post said, however, administration officials feel such a suit may still be filed in Mississippi, where some 30 to 40 districts refuse to develop voluntary desegregation plans.

Foreign Aid Bill Lowest Since '46

WASHINGTON (AP) — After eliminating an $80 million Peace Corps expenditure and ending some political restrictions on overseas assistance, the House has approved a $2.2 billion foreign aid bill.

The cuts made the bill, passed Thursday 193 to 15, the lowest foreign aid appropriation since the program was initiated in 1946.

The Senate, however, is expected to restore the money to finance next year's Peace Corps operations. And nearly all political restrictions cut from the bill remain in effect through other laws.

The cuts were made Thursday on parliamentary maneuvers. Not a cent was taken from the original $2.3 billion bill by House vote.

Of the $2.22 billion total, $1.6 billion is for economic and military assistance abroad. The remainder is for programs related to foreign assistance.

One of the few actual losses appeared to be a sense-of-Congress proviso that Red China should be refused admission to the United Nations.

Most of the political restrictions have been renewed in the annual money bill for 18 years without ever being challenged. Their removal was pressed by House Foreign Affairs Committee members on grounds they have no business in a money bill.

Included were provisions that aid should not be supplied to countries supplying arms or assistance to North Vietnam or Cuba, restrictions against use of funds to build up arsenals, supplying aid to Communist countries, and others.

Nearly all are contained in the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, House members said.

The $80 million Peace Corps money was knocked out on grounds Congress has not yet authorized the money.

The House is expected to approve restoration of all or most of the Peace Corps funds.

Major Fighting Now Closer To the Cambodian Capital

SAIGON (AP) — Enemy troops overran Set Bo and then lost it to a Cambodian counter-attack Thursday in a battle only 10 miles southeast of Phnom Penh, officers in the field reported. It was the closest major fighting to the Cambodian capital so far.

The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong struck before dawn and captured the government military post. The enemy troops evidently were looking for fresh supplies.

Army officers in the field said the Cambodian army struck back with the support of fighter-bombers and the enemy troops retreated to the southwest.

The Cambodian high command said North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces launched a major attack on Kompong Thom and pushed part way into that provincial capital 80 miles north of Phnom Penh. It represented the farthest enemy penetration on the northern front.

Late telephone reports from Kompong Thom said the fighting had died down to sporadic firing with enemy forces still holding part of the city of 25,000.

The upsurge of fighting came as South Vietnamese Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky and his delegation arrived in Phnom Penh for talks with high Cambodian officials. The delegation was met by Premier Lon Nol.

Informed sources said the two sides would put into operation agreements signed last week to restore full diplomatic relations, broken since 1963.

"Together it will be possible for us rapidly to check the Communist threat and bring back peace, the kind of peace which will insure for each country total sovereignty and for each people full liberty to choose the system and policies they like," Ky said in a brief airport speech.

In South Vietnam the enemy stepped up shelling of allied installations.

The U.S. Command reported 71 enemy shelling in the 24-hour period ended at 8 a.m. Thursday—nearly three times the recent average of 25 per day. The bombardments killed three Americans and wounded 26.

Government headquarters reported the shelling killed 16 South Vietnamese and wounded 60.

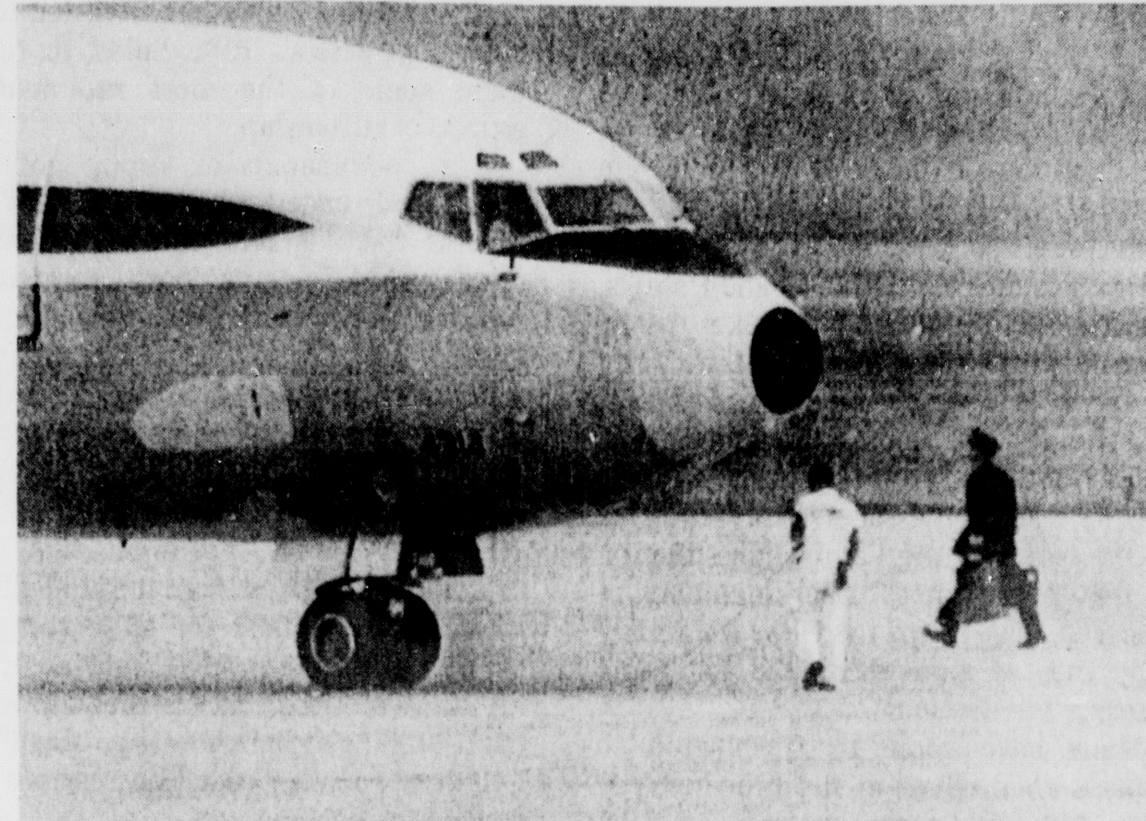

The attacks centered mainly in the north and central regions of South Vietnam, with little activity in the 3rd Corps region encompassing Saigon and bordering Cambodia.

Relatively light ground fighting was reported Thursday in Cambodia and South Vietnam. Two Americans were killed and two were injured when their light observation helicopters collided while dodging enemy ground fire 10 miles northwest of Pleiku in the central highlands.

The U.S. Command reported American casualties in the Indochina war as 165 killed and 757 wounded last week, compared to 142 killed and 808 wounded the previous week.

They said 110 of those killed in the week ended at midnight Saturday died in combat in Vietnam, and the remaining 55 in Cambodia; 521 of the wounded were in Vietnam and 236 in Cambodia.

Smith Fears Silent Majority Explosion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Margaret Chase Smith fears the silent majority may be seething toward an explosion over turmoil and violence—and that repression, even virtual dictatorship, might be the ultimate result.

If it came to a choice, the Maine Republican said, Americans who now are quiet would prefer repression to anarchy. And then, she added, the word might one day spread from Washington: No more dissent, clamp down on civil liberties.

Mrs. Smith discussed in an interview with The Associated Press the concerns that led her to caution the Senate Monday that violence and extremism is "increasingly forcing upon the American people the narrow choice between anarchy and repression."

Her warning against extremism of the left or the right was uttered on the 20th anniversary of the declaration of conscience in which she repudiated the tactics of the late Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy.

Excerpts from the interview: Q: You said that now as in 1950 there is a national feeling of fear and frustration that could result in national suicide. What causes it?

A: I think there's an unrest. I think the problem on the campuses. I think the violence. I think the uncertainty in business, inflation, uncertainty in world affairs. I think all of this is starting to set up a period of fear and frustration.

Q: Does it stem from the war in Southeast Asia?

A: I don't think entirely. I can say only what I have seen on the campuses and the students with whom I've talked. While they're talking about Cambodia a good deal and saying that Cambodia is the basis for all this, and that's what we're hearing all the time, the questions don't indicate that. The questions are few as far as Cambodia and Vietnam are concerned, they just cover the whole front.

Q: So the end of the Vietnam war would not solve the problems you describe?

A: I'm sorry. I think it won't. I think this is just one small part of it, heavens knows it's a big enough part.

Q: Have you had any reaction from the White House to your speech?

A: I've had some calls from the White House. The people with whom I've talked have been quite complimentary in their remarks, saying it was very timely, that they're glad someone spoke up in whom people had confidence.

Q: Your speech implied that the nation is facing near revolution. Is it?

A: I think that a great many people feel that we have been in revolution. I personally feel if we're not we're pretty close to it.

Q: What in your mind is the most urgent problem in the country today?

A: I think crime is No. 1. I think the laws should be enforced and I think the enforcement officers should be encouraged rather than discouraged. Vietnam is a serious situation. I think perhaps the people, mainly the silent people, are even more con-

Symington Urges Nation Be Told

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Rep. James Symington, D-Mo., urged Thursday the nation be told about "the economics of war" and that price, wage and profit restraints be accepted for duration of the Southeast Asian conflict.

"We can stop the recession by reversing present tight-money policies, and we can stop inflation by insuring that all sectors of the economy bear their full share of the war's cost," Symington told members of the Rotary Club.

"As a start we must accelerate our withdrawal from the war in Indochina, which will reduce the inflationary dollars being poured into the economy."

Symington suggested appointment of a special federal board of commission to shed light on sources of the nation's inflation.

"Further tax reform also is needed," he said, "if we are to be certain that we are not feeding the fires of inflation."

Ten Men Working To Settle Budget

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Ten Men conducted the most vital business of this special legislative session Thursday—trying to settle the differences between the House and Senate on an austerity budget for 1970-71.

The five House members and five senators labored behind locked doors on the first of the bills to go into House-Senate conference. The rest are expected to be delivered Monday. Other legislators were taking the weekend off.

At this point the differences between the two houses were being discussed—or argued—with no votes taken to set battle lines. That will come only after all the bills are available and under consideration a senator said.

The joint conference on appropriations generally comes close to the windup of any budget session. The money distribution to agencies and institutions normally is the most important issue before the General Assembly and usually the last to be solved.

This special session must end Sunday, June 14 but could finish sooner.

This time the budget totals a little over $1.4 billion with no new programs and almost no new construction beyond a new medical school in Kansas City, a new chemistry building at Rolla and a start on a maximum security prison to house the least controllable of Missouri's prisoners.

Senate conferees on the joint conference committee are Sens. T. D. McNeal, D-St. Louis; Omer H. Avery, D-Troy; J. F. Patterson, D-Caruthersville; Donald L. Manford, D-Kansas City, and A. Clifford Jones, R-Clayton.

House members are Reps. E. J. (Lucky) Cantrell, D-Overland, Charles Dickey, D-Mexico, William F. Casey, D-Potosi; Dean Shaver, D-Anderson, and H. F. Holland, R-Sheridan.

McNeal and Cantrell are chairmen of the Senate and House appropriation committees.

Request Tradition Changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Democratic Congress members launched a move Thursday to change some of the traditions of the House, along with its leaders.

The leadership change is assured, since Speaker John W. McCormack has announced he is retiring at the end of this year. Reps. Henry Reuss of Wisconsin and Charles A. Vanik of Ohio proposed that candidates for all party leadership posts next January make clear their positions on what Reuss and Vanik call four essential reforms.

Their targets include the hallowed seniority system, by which members advance to powerful committee chairmanships on the basis of length of service alone, and House procedures by which members vote on vital issues presented in amendments without having their individual positions recorded.

Vanik said at a joint news conference Congress is "an institution at least one and one-half generations behind the times it is intended to serve."

Vanik and Reuss came to Congress together in 1955 and so have already reaped some benefits yielded by length of service. Reuss is chairman of two subcommittees. Vanik holds membership on the sought-after Ways and Means Committee

Urges Moving Department Here

By PETE DANIELS
City Editor

A resolution introduced in the Missouri House Wednesday requested that an entire government department, employing about 500 people, be moved from Jefferson City to Sedalia.

Rep. Thomas A. Walsh, D-St. Louis, asked the House to consider moving the big Agriculture Department, which occupies the 13th floor of the Jefferson Building, to the Fairgrounds here.

A copy of the resolution was made available to The Democrat by Rep. Joe Rains of Sedalia.

"If it were approved," Rains said, "the action would allow the Revenue Department, which has offices in several buildings now, to be housed under one roof."

W. C. Askew, secretary of the State Fair, said, "Being a Sedalian I'd be selfish enough to like seeing the department here, but we just don't have the facilities to take care of the Agriculture Department."

The resolution cited the Agriculture Department's importance to the state's economy and said the "effective function of this department depends on its having adequate facilities to carry on its work."

It requested that the "House of Representatives express its sentiment to the Board of Public Buildings and the Division of Planning and Construction and the Governor of Missouri, that the offices of the Missouri State Department of Agriculture be moved to the State Fairgrounds at Sedalia where adequate facilities do exist, largely unused most of the year."

The idea of "adequate" facilities at the Fairgrounds seems to be the most questionable so far. If legislators were to decide, and gain Governor Hearnes' blessing, on relocating the department, the remaining question would be exactly where it would be moved.

"The only buildings with heat on the Fairgrounds are the Administration Building and Agriculture Building," Askew said.

That could leave the Agriculture Department with a problem. "If they want to put up a building here, it's fine with me," Askew said.

Askew admitted that there was enough space at the Fairgrounds for another building, but he pointed to another problem.

"I don't know what they'd do during the Fair," he said. The least of the problem would be noise at Fair time, and one of the worst would involve traffic congestion — among other things.

The Agriculture Department employs about 500 people in Jefferson City. The department is broken down into 12 divisions. The resolution would move the entire department, not just sections of it.

If the department were actually moved, it would definitely solve some space problems in Jefferson City, Rains said.

It was not known Thursday when House members, who quit for the weekend Wednesday, would consider the resolution during the final week of the special session that starts Monday.

The likeliest possibility is it will be passed over entirely during the hectic hours before final adjournment of the session.

Hijacker Is Captured After Second Landing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A hijacker demanding $100 million cash from the U.S. Treasury held 51 airline passengers hostage in a wired six-hour drama Thursday before he was lured back to the ground and seized by the FBI. The plane's captain was shot, federal aviation officials said.

Some of the plane's passengers—witnesses said about 20—had scrambled off the plane after FBI agents shot out its tires when it landed for a second time at Dulles International Airport.

Then the co-pilot radioed: "The captain has been shot—get an ambulance."

A radio message moments later said a doctor was in attendance.

The FAA said the injured man was Capt. Dale C. Hupe and he appeared to be all right.

A small caliber weapon has been used against him, the federal officials said. They added that the pilot received an intestinal wound, one shot in the stomach.

Messages from the plane were being monitored by The Associated Press in the office of Jet America, which had tuned in the tower frequency.

A voice from the cockpit said "have somebody in communication contact Hupe's wife and advise her in Kansas City he is being taken to Fairfax Hospital."

Release New Drug For Sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration released for public sale Thursday the first effective medication for Parkinson's disease, saying it "shows promise of being one of the major drug discoveries of recent years."

The new drug, L-dopa, should provide partial to total relief for two of every three persons suffering the arm or leg tremors or rigidity of the disease, the FDA said.

But Dr. Charles C. Edwards, the FDA commissioner, warned that a majority of persons tested with the drug suffered "quite unpleasant and even dangerous" side effects. And agency officials said an average patient can expect to pay initially between $350 and $1,000 a year for the medication.

The nation's largest source of L-dopa, Nutritional Biochemicals Co., announced in Cleveland Wednesday it is reducing

Eagleton Speaks Frankly

Since verbal brickbats have been tossed at our state's junior senator Thomas F. Eagleton by some Central Missourians who have disagreed with him on matters of public interest, more than casual attention should be given statements in "Frankly Speaking," his weekly letter to constituents.

On the subject of Students and Politics, Senator Tom's comment strikes us as offering positive guidance at a time when tempers are short because of recent behavioral patterns throughout the country.

Let's read his message:

One result of the Cambodian situation is that I and most other members of Congress have heard the views of literally thousands of students in the last three weeks.

Many have come to Washington to express themselves in the time-honored way, but one rarely before used by students — lobbying their elected representatives. Others have asked me to come to their campuses to talk with them, and I have.

At the same time I have received scores of letters from Missourians who are desperately concerned about campus protests, deeply resentful of campus violence and even fearful that this student generation is the first wave of a coming revolution.

I have been castigated by some students who see me as representing the Establishment. On the other hand, I have been lambasted in editorials and letters for even talking to students at all.

My conclusion from these recent experiences is that the apparent gap between the campuses and the rest of society is real and serious, but is not as irremediable as it seems.

And I have found generally that people on both sides of the fence are anxiously trying to discover better ways to get through to each other.

Want To Be Heard

I found the vast majority of the students I talked with to be bright, articulate and sincere in their views — but frustrated and bewildered as to where to turn within our political system to make their views heard effectively. They want a Congress and an Administration which reflects their views, but many don't really know how the electoral process works.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Laos Is Eyeing Cambodian Example

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The ouster of Cambodia's Prince Sihanouk has stirred up plots in Laos to dump Prince Souvanna Phouma and set up a Cambodian-style military government. This could repeat the Cambodian crisis all over again in Laos, with dangerous consequences for the U.S.

Intelligence reports warn that rightist Laotian leaders have been encouraged by the Cambodian experience to attempt a similar takeover in their country. They are weary of the aging Souvanna Phouma who, like Sihanouk, has put on a show of outward neutrality. But just as Sihanouk permitted secret incursions by the North Vietnamese, Souvanna Phouma allowed the Americans to operate in Laos.

The Kremlin had promised both leaders that the North Vietnamese would leave their countries after the Vietnam war was settled. But as the encroachments increased, the two princes lost faith in the Soviet promise and concluded that the North Vietnamese would never clear out voluntarily.

Souvanna Phouma turned increasingly to the U.S. to save Laos from the Communist crunch. But Sihanouk flew to Moscow and Peking to enlist support in getting the North Vietnamese out of Cambodia. While he was on this mission, he was deposed by the generals he left behind. Now he has joined the same forces, ironically, that he had tried to remove.

—Secret Understanding—

Washington and Moscow reached a secret understanding, meanwhile, to keep still about the U.S. intervention in Laos. As long as the U.S. didn't officially acknowledge its clandestine operations, the Kremlin agreed to ignore them.

The Russians, as they had promised Sihanouk and Souvanna Phouma, also guaranteed there would be no North Vietnamese takeover of Laos and Cambodia. Both the Soviets and Americans agreed to endeavor, at least, to confine the war to South Vietnam.

At no time did the U.S. wish to expand the Vietnam conflict into a full-scale Indochina war. Restricting the battlefield to South Vietnam, however, also had advantages for the Communists. It meant that the U.S. could never really win the war. For it is impossible to defeat an enemy who can escape across the border into sanctuaries.

In 1964, the North Vietnamese began enlarging their sanctuary privileges in Laos by attacking the Plain of Jars and increasing the infiltration down the Ho Chi Minh spiderweb of trails.

Somewhere along the line their parents, their high school civics teachers and their college professors have failed to teach them some of the most rudimentary aspects of citizenship.

This combination of strong political views and uncertainty as to how to express them is one of the reasons, I think, why students have sometimes resorted to primitive kinds of politics — even mob actions. It also explains why some of them respond to radical orators offering simplistic solutions for the nation's ills.

Work Within System

I have found, however, that the overwhelming majority of the students to whom I have talked are quite ready to "work within the system" and accept it on its own terms, once somebody takes the trouble to explain how to go about it: . . . how to work in a Congressional or mayoral campaign

. . . how elected representatives have to be judged on the basis of a wide variety of issues and not just on the war

. . . how you sometimes have to compromise in politics and can't expect every decision to go your way

. . . how sometimes you just plain lose, and how you have to fight again another day — within the system.

This kind of old fashioned political action has a lot more appeal to most of them than nebulous rhetoric and futile demonstrations.

It is a challenge most of them are ready and eager to accept, and I think we will see a lot of young people in this year's Congressional campaigns.

But the system, in turn, must be ready to accommodate them. We can no longer offer them more politics-as-usual and more disillusion.

No Room For Elitism

One point I have repeatedly emphasized is that students are not a special group with special wisdom or special privileges within our society. They deserve to be heard just like anybody else — no more and no less.

There is no room for an intellectual elite or any other elite in American political life.

This brings me to one final point: It would do a great deal to reunify America, I believe, if we stopped treating "youth" and "students" as a separate category of angels or villains, and start treating them as ordinary citizens.

The U.S. countered by stepping up its clandestine activities and bombing the infiltration routes. After the bombing of North Vietnam was halted in 1968, the U.S. simply moved the sorties across the border and concentrated the full fury upon Red targets in Laos.

—CIA's Secret Army—

The Central Intelligence Agency, meanwhile, has subsidized a secret army in Laos under Gen. Vang Pao, a vulgar ex-French army sergeant, whose 14,000 fighting men have been recruited largely from the minority Meo tribes.

The secret army is headquartered at the multi-million-dollar CIA base of Long Cheng. A steady stream of Air America and Continental Air Services planes, under CIA and AID contracts, haul food, munitions and the monthly payroll for Vang Pao's troops.

Stories have now leaked out about this clandestine army, describing it accurately as the only effective fighting force in Laos on the American side. Yet my reporter in Indochina, Les Whitten, reports from Vientiane:

"The sad fact is that all the millions expended upon Vang Pao's mercenaries have not convinced one responsible U.S. official in Saigon or Vientiane that this land of 2.8 million people can be defended for more than a few weeks by the secret army against a determined Communist attack."

"The Communist Pathet Lao and North Vietnamese control half of Laos and clearly could take over the other half almost at will."

Whitten adds that "the fabled CIA forces, which liberal senators regard as some kind of powerful presence in Laos, are made up, in fact, of time servers, a few brilliant intelligence men and a larger number of ex-servicemen who are as harassed as any Washington bureaucrats simply trying to carry out routine duties."

"Much of their time is spent going to Lao units like traveling salesmen taking orders for ammunition and guns. At other times, they are paymasters, making sure that Vang Pao's officers don't pocket the pay that is supposed to go to the soldiers."

"The CIA agents also wearily stress to the Laotians on the U.S. payroll: 'No boom boom, no rice.' If they refuse to fight, in other words, they will get no food or pay."

"While the secret army is at least classifiable as a military force, some of the other Laotian army units are hardly more than poorly trained and homesick militia. Their pay is as low as $6 per month, compared to about $25 for Vang Pao's riflemen."

"The Lao generals, meanwhile, are up to their brass buttons in scandals. Some front for such enterprises as bowling alleys and nightclubs, often owned by Chinese. The name of a general protects the owner from confiscation or excessive taxation by corrupt officials."

"This Sort of Thing Could Get Unpleasant!"

President's Power: A Steamroller

By BRUCE BIOSSAT
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)

Since the onset of the events in Cambodia and at Kent State, the power of the presidency to overawe—if not to overwhelm—has been freshly and dramatically demonstrated to those of us who try to cover the main scene.

Talking recently at Santa Fe, N.M., with the bare handful of governors who arrived there only to learn that their semiannual Republican conference had been canceled, we found considerable disagreement with President Nixon's policies and attitudes as they affect the war, youthful unrest and related matters.

When we next saw these governors, their spokesmen (and their Democratic counterparts) had just emerged from an hours-long meeting at the White House with the President and several key aides. The transformation in the governors' behavior was notable.

Though they did concede that argument—and even disagreement—had surfaced in the meeting, their tone as they spoke to newsmen was respectful and deferential in the extreme.

An outsider unaccustomed to the ways of politics would have judged they considered themselves greatly fortunate to have been invited into the august White House setting to be told how things are in the nation and the world.

Now the cluster of newsmen who talked to some of these same governors at Santa Fe predicted it would be exactly this way when they came into the presidential presence and were surrounded by all the impressive trappings of White House power.

We also predicted, correctly, that the President would quickly seize control of his May 8 evening press conference and turn it largely to his own service amid the turmoil generated by Cambodia and Kent.

Newsmen who regularly attend or observe presidential press conferences have known for a long time how badly flawed this mechanism is as a means of extracting from the President information they think the public should have. We really do not need guidance on this score from dilettantish cult-writers who dip in and out for an occasional sneering look at the process.

The truth is, the conference format and setting give the President ample and immediate opportunity to set the tone of any such interrogation, to dominate it all the way, to ignore tough questions by giving "answers" that are not answers at all, to escape hard pursuit amid the predictable barrage of disjointed, unrelated questioning.

Here again, an overawing effect is created by the dazzling aura that engulfs the presidency. Questioners who want to be tough often find themselves serving up exceedingly deferential queries. Nixon, an old hand at this business knocks those fat ones out of the ball park.

The presidency is so powerful today that it has ingenious weapons to employ against any kind of counterforce, whether emanating from the press, from Congress, from the campuses or wherever.

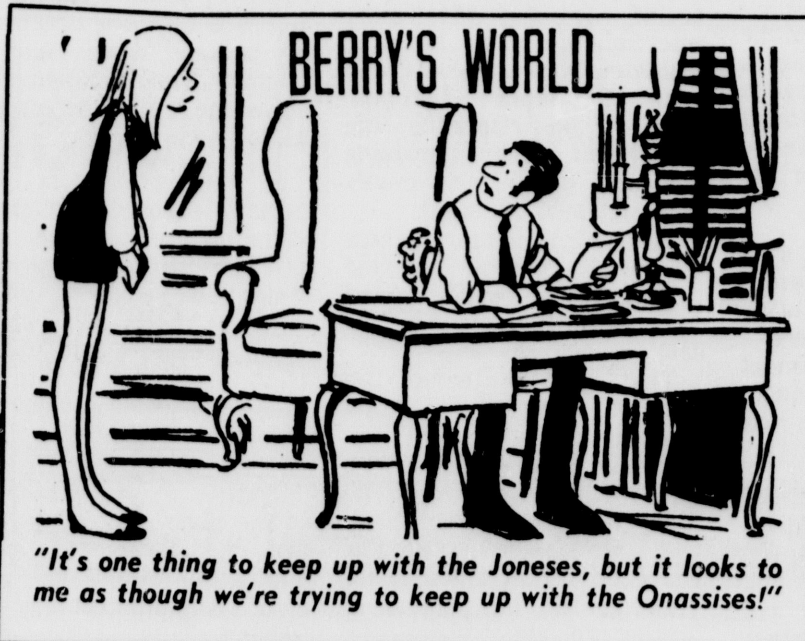

Example:

The President plainly has been troubled, in the current confusion, by the fresh output of stories and columns depicting him as a peculiarly isolated man. (Actually, this has been written many times before.)

How does he deal with it? By releasing a small flood of statistics on the frequency of his meetings with his cabinet, with the National Security Council and other advisers. And by suddenly having his picture taken with all kinds of people, as further proof he is in "contact" with the outside world just as much as any president.

In truth, this is surface stuff and does not disprove the case made for his essential isolation. But it would be risky to assume that this calculated flurry from the White House does not deposit a considerable fallout amid the American public.

The dangers here are at least two-fold. This President—and maybe any other—can often effectively smother adversaries who contest him in an increasingly unequal battle. When he is outgunned, it is usually achieved by lifting skepticism to such dramatic heights that he may not be believed by many when, thereafter, he may deserve to be.

Most of the time the negative double is used with a rather weak hand—7-11 high-card points. The idea is that it gives you a chance to compete safely at a low level. This doesn't mean that you can't use it with a very strong hand as the start toward a slam.

The way to get to the slam is to follow the negative double with a cue bid of the enemy suit. This cue bid by responder does not necessarily show control of the adverse suit. It merely announces that responder is forcing to game.

North and South were playing the simple negative double so that North's double of one spade guaranteed hearts.

South's two-heart bid was the normal response to the double. His jump to four hearts after North's cue bid merely showed that he had bid his two hearts cheerfully. Remember that the two heart call had not shown any additional values.

The four-heart bid was enough to send North winging to the slam. He even tried five no-trump as a mild try for seven.

Six hearts makes easily. South wins the spade lead, draws trumps, discards dummy's losing spade on the long club and eventually loses a diamond.

Six clubs can't be made because there are only 11 tricks in that suit. The 4-4 heart fit produces the extra trick with hearts as trump; the 5-4 club fit won't help with clubs as trump.

Six hearts might well be reached without the use of the negative double. These modern wonder bids aren't always essential. All we can say is that the negative double sure helped this time.

Economy Seen Turning Corner

By RAY CROMLEY

NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — It is easy these days to go to a government economist and get an optimistic evaluation of what the economy is going to be doing six months or a year from now.

There is a well-marked administration line. This reporter, therefore, has made it his business of late to talk to men who make economics their business but who are not in the government or necessarily sympathetic with it.

What has come up is surprising for the consensus of these economists is that from a technical standpoint we have begun to turn the corner toward renewed growth.

This may not be very heartening to the man who loses his job in the next two months or to the housewife who sees her grocery bills continue to move up for some months to come.

But this belief is important in the sense that these men see daylight ahead, not continued gloom and not a 1929-30 plunge downward.

These economists do hedge a bit. The speed with which improvement comes depends, they say, on how much of his earnings and his savings the consumer is willing to spend.

If he freezes, in fear of a thumping depression, we're in for trouble. But if the consumer spends at a normal rate, things should gradually grow better and by a year from now the economy should be growing again at a reasonable or normal rate (with inflation not wiped out but pushing ahead at a much slower rate than in the recent past).

The thing to note in this regard is that personal income overall has more than kept pace with inflation. Personal income nationally today is between 6 and 7 per cent above what it was in July, 1969.

Industrial wages are moving ahead markedly. Government workers' incomes are higher. Social Security payments are larger.

Barring some major unexpected shift in the economy, the growth in personal income is expected to continue through the remainder of this year.

In making their predictions, the economists this reporter knows are making certain assumptions on what the administration is going to do based in part on what President Nixon's men have done already.

These economists note that since early this year the Federal Reserve Board has been increasing the money supply — whereas previously the board had been checking that growth.

If this trend continues, it will be easier to borrow money. Eventually, interest rates should go down and the rate of price growth should be slowed.

Some administration restraints on federally aided state and local construction have been eased.

These economists expect that in the months ahead there will be a series of additional small administration moves of this sort — some real (as those noted above) and some psychological, as the cut in margin requirements for buying shares on the stock exchanges.

But the economists are basing their feeling that we have turned the corner on a variety of indicators which have become mixed and confused, some pointing up, others down. This mixture itself is a sign that we are turning a corner of sorts.

The Gross National Product has held relatively steady for something like nine months, even after discounting the effects of inflation. Employment has gained slightly in the same period, despite the increase in unemployment. Over-all industrial output has held up well, despite the major slumps in defense buying, automobile sales and home building.

DOCTOR'S MAILBAG

Mental Illness Symptoms Need Careful Diagnosis

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Q — What are the symptoms of mental illness? How can you get a mentally sick person to seek treatment?

A — The symptoms vary with the type of illness. If a diagnosis of mental illness is confirmed by a doctor and if the disease renders the victim dangerous to himself or others he can be committed to a mental hospital. Otherwise his request for help must be voluntary and persuading him to seek treatment against his will can be very frustrating.

Q — What causes schizophrenia? Is there any cure for it?

A — The cause of this disease is not well understood but recent studies have shed some light on the problem. In some cases, the cause may be an inborn error of metabolism. In many ways the resulting symptoms resemble those experienced after taking LSD. Heredity appears to be a factor in some cases. One theory favors environment rather than heredity since in some cases it was found that a child who is subjected to a welter of confused ideas may later become schizophrenic.

Great improvements have been made in the treatment of schizophrenics. Although it cannot be said that they are cured, many have through proper treatment, been enabled to live at home and hold a job. Such patients invariably do better in a home environment than in a hospital.

Q — After a myelogram, some of the opaque dye remains in the spinal canal. Can this cause any harm? What happens to the dye?

A — The dye will not harm you. It is gradually absorbed and eliminated over a period of months or years.

Patch in Time Saves Slacks

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—I am answering both Mrs. H. G. and Mrs. J. W. regarding ironing patches on clothes. I use them liberally and apply them to the wrong side of the material when it becomes thin, instead of waiting for a real hole to appear. I use them on both knees and elbows and especially on my husband's slacks. A patch in time has saved many a shirt and pair of slacks and there is no worry about matching colors when they are applied on the wrong side. Like another reader, I have a mouton coat. Mine is 20 years old and really looks almost new, even though the lining is now due for a replacement. I have it stored each summer and cleaned professionally when necessary. If badly soiled, this may be done every year but usually every two or three years is sufficient.—MARY MARGARET

DEAR POLLY—I find the Pointers helpful and have clipped and saved quite a few but have never received or heard of anyone who did receive a dollar for one. I hope the following will do it: When saving a washing instructions for a garment or item, I cut a tiny swatch from the inner facing or from a seam edge and glue this to the instruction tag. This eliminates guessing which washing tip goes with which dress, sweater or whatever.—MRS. W. S.

MRS. W. G.—You now know of someone who has received a Polly Dollar.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—I have just decorated an attic room that will be used as a child's room. I could not afford to carpet it, so used eight carpet tiles left over from the playroom to make a slide-proof bedside throw rug. The adhesive is on the back of each of these tiles so they stick to the floor. For extra fun, I am gluing wool fringe around the edges.—CHARLOTTE

"In view of polls showing public sentiment against this boondoggle, the back-breaking, ear-splitting SST... I am confident a public vote would have produced a different result," Reuss said.

And Vanik said he believes there would have been "tremendous differences" in the reforms included in last year's tax bill if the Ways and Means Committee's sessions on the legislation had been open.

It is not uncommon for someone's expressed position to be one thing on the floor and another in the drafting process," he said.

New Ordinance Bans Livestock In Smithton

SMITHTON — The Board of Aldermen Wednesday night passed an ordinance prohibiting keeping livestock of any kind within the city limits.

Previously an ordinance had prevented only swine from being kept within the city limits. This was extended to include all livestock and fowl.

City Clerk Mrs. Barbara McMullin said a new law forbidding all dogs to run loose on the city streets, and requiring them to have rabies shots before dog licenses are issued, would be drawn up by City Attorney W. K. Gibson.

Mayor Buel Clemons presided at the meeting. Routine business included reading a report of the recent finance committee meeting. The board will meet later this month to complete work on the annual city budget, Mrs. McMullin said.

Committee Considers New Code

A recent U.S. Supreme Court decision citing a ban on long hair as unconstitutional may affect the deliberations of a committee set up to design a dress code for Smith-Cotton High School.

Mrs. Edward Worley, committee chairman, said, "We are aware of the decision and will certainly do nothing that is against the constitution." The group held its first meeting Wednesday.

Any decisions made by the S-C dress code committee must be approved by the Board of Education, Finley said. The group was organized primarily because the present dress code is too general.

S-C Principal Earl Finley said last week the school had no guidelines now regarding length of hair or beards. He said the establishment of such rules would be discussed by the dress code committee.

Last Monday the Supreme Court unanimously upheld a lower court ruling that the constitutional rights of two Wisconsin high school boys had been violated when they were expelled for having long hair.

The original judgment was made by the U.S. Circuit Court in Chicago last December. It stated in part that, "the right to wear one's hair at any length or in any desired manner is an ingredient of personal freedom protected by the United States Constitution."

Members of the local committee are: S-C students, Bill Raumaker, Bill Morrow, Lucy Tompkins and Greg Shoemaker; Board of Education members, Mrs. Paul Hausam and Glenn Kell Jr.; faculty members, Mrs. Jean Rountzong and Harry Browder; the Rev. Denis Kraft of the United Methodist Church and Mrs. Cynthia Collins.

Mrs. Worley said anyone with suggestions for a better dress code could contact a committee member. She reported that the next meeting would be held at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday at Smith-Cotton.

Hijacker

Contact families of other crew members and advise no other injuries.

The Federal Aviation Administration said an FBI agent was shot in the thumb while wrestling with the hijacker.

People started running from the plane—it was not immediately clear how they got out—shortly after the plane landed at Dulles for the second time.

A fire truck blocked the runway and other vehicles circled around the aircraft. A few minutes after the plane touched down, persons started getting out.

The hijacker said, "Get these people off the runway. Turn around immediately."

The pilot said "he'll kill us unless you let us get out of here." At 7:20 p.m. the hijacker came on the radio and said, "You're stalling, you're risking the lives of these people."

The airport control tower replied, "Negative, we're not stalling. We're trying to reach these people and get them off of here."

The man had collected $100,750 from the airline—the first ransom ever paid a hijacker—after he forced the Phoenix-to-Washington TWA jet to land at Dulles International Airport.

But the hijacker claimed he was shortchanged and refused to release the passengers or crew of six. Instead, radioing "you'd better get me the money," he forced the plane to take off on a circuitous route south, then north over New York state, then south back to the Washington area.

As the red-and-white jet circled in the slate gray skies above the nation's capital, airline and government officials pondered their next move in perhaps the strangest hijacking episode in history.

Radio exchanges with the pilot indicated the airline was trying to arrange for more money.

Single Status Suits 'That Girl' Bill Cosby Is Host With Dick Cavett At Emmy Awards

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Marlo Thomas sat in her hotel suite in New York surrounded by a dozen baskets and bouquets of carnations, roses, tulips, grape hyacinths, baby's breath. No, the floral offerings did not spell out e-n-g-a-g-e-d, insisted the vivacious actress. "They were sent by many admirers, not by one man."

"I'm single by choice," she added — as if she could be single for any other reason.

Marlo also plays a single girl in her television show, "That Girl." The situation comedy which depicts a romance with a boy friend named Donald, now in its fourth year, is extremely popular, especially among teenagers.

"There was a possibility that we might change my single girl status on the show, but the kids didn't want us to," she says, laughing. "When I told a big rally of fans that I just might marry Donald on the show, they screamed 'no' in a chorus, so I'll remain single on television, too."

Marlo's expressive eyes — large and fringed heavily with lashes — always provoke comments.

"People have told me that you can always tell a Scorpio by her big eyes. But in my family everyone has big brown eyes, and my mother is a Pisces and my father (Danny Thomas) is a Capricorn."

"I try to fight astrology, but it fascinates me."

"Scorpio people are great homemakers," she continues. "It is true, I'd rather be home than at any other place. After a 14-hour work day, I can't think of anything more wonderful than sitting at home with friends or eating breakfast, lunch or dinner outdoors." She did that all last summer.

Her house is set up to suit her many moods. She can eat in every room.

"I have a dining room that seats 14 people. When there are only six people, we can eat at the refectory table in the same room. When there are two people, we eat at a game table in the living room. I love a nice quiet evening at home and then I eat in the bedroom where I have a 48-inch gateleg table. It is so cozy and relaxing."

If she does go out to dinner which is seldom, it is on a

MARLO THOMAS

Monday night when "there is hardly anyone in the restaurant..."

Marlo used to live in an apartment, where the motif of her favorite flower, the daisy, was sprinkled liberally on accessories. Now she has two big gardens of daisies — a 40-foot block in front of the house and a 30-foot block in the rear.

"When they're in bloom, I arrange fresh cut daisies in every room. You must keep cutting daisies so the garden doesn't look straggly, but the cut places fill in because daisies are so prolific," she says with authority.

She claims she is a one-house woman. "I couldn't stand to divide my affection between two houses."

Her recent movie debut in "Jenny" earned great notices. But this is nothing unusual. A few years ago, she won rave reviews when she played in the London stage production of "Barefoot in the Park." Marlo also has won five of television's highest honors.

But her acting career and her home aren't her only interests. She serves on the board of directors of the Inner-City Cultural Center in Beverly Hills and is actively engaged in fundraising for the St. Jude Hospital in Memphis, Tenn. The hospital was founded by her father.

The inner-city project, headed by Gregory Peck, was planned with the purpose of opening vistas and new experiences in the theatre to high school students, particularly those in underprivileged areas. In the past year, it has led to another project — to bring young people right into the theatre to see whether their interest might be sparked in some facet of the theatre work — from scenery design to backstage carpentry. It is a way to initiate goals," she explains.

"It is difficult for ghetto children to realize a goal if they haven't been exposed to such endeavors."

Marlo is national chairman of the annual teen-age march for St. Jude's Hospital which has made tremendous progress in research for leukemia, she says.

"It makes me livid when I hear people criticize teen-agers because a few of them have received unpleasant publicity," she sounds off. "It costs $3,500,000 to maintain the hospital each year — no one pays there — and $2,000,000 of that sum is raised by teen-agers."

"The young people put tremendous effort into the march. They work for an entire month setting things up with the assistance of only one adult in each city," she explains.

Marlo goes to key cities to help rally the teen-agers.

Her popularity with young people has led to a buddy-buddy relationship. She now receives from them about 2,500 letters a week. Most of the letters ask her advice about love problems.

William Demarest, featured on television's My Three Sons, broke into show business with his two brothers, entertaining on porches of fashionable hotels in Asbury Park, N.J. "I played a shaky cello and Reuben and George played piano and violin, respectively," he says. "At the end of a performance we passed the hat, and the average night's take was six or seven dollars, which was pretty good money in those days."

Dick Cavett will be the Television Academy's host at Carnegie Hall in New York, and Bill Cosby will be host to the assembled notables at the Century Plaza Hotel in Hollywood as The Emmy Awards presentations are held simultaneously on both coasts.

This year, to streamline the 22nd annual presentation by the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, only the so-called "glamor" categories will be televised. The winners of the news and documentary categories were announced May 18th at special East-West cocktail parties. The seventeen winners, however, will attend the June 7th telecast and will be saluted in a group.

To pay special honor to the all-important "crafts," these awards were made May 23rd at gala dinners given simultaneously on both coasts.

Two new Emmys will be introduced this year, one for "outstanding new series." In addition, last year's category of "outstanding variety of musical program" has been subdivided to preclude a "Sinatra Special" from competing with an "S. Hurok Presents." Now there's one Emmy for the pop scene and another for the classical music fans.

The nominees are chosen by the votes of more than 7,000 members of the academy who are actively and creatively engaged in television. Selection of the winners is made by blue ribbon panels of artists and craftsmen, distinguished in their own fields, who screen all the nominated achievements and cast their votes by secret ballot.

Shari Lewis, who is doing a BBC television show regularly, made a command performance for the British royal family. Afterwards, she met the family, and young Princess Anne asked her how a girl happened to become interested in ventriloquism.

Shari explained that it all began with her father, a top amateur magician, who introduced her to magic and puppets.

Princess Anne thought a moment and then said, "Yes, one does tend to get involved in the family business, doesn't one?" (NEA)

Producer Bert Nodella of The Tim Conway Show hired the fastest pencil in the west — a crack stenographer — to keep up with the ad libs Tim and Joe Flynn throw into the scripts of their shows.

Then he gave up. The secretary couldn't catch them all. He went out and got a tape recorder. The secretary now transcribes the tapes. It's the only way Nodella can get a script that approximates the final product. (NEA)
